VOL. V.—NO. 1276. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1855. PRICE TWO CENTS

TERRIBLE CALAMITY.

Disastrous Fire in State-street.

SIX PERSONS BURNED AND SUFFOCATED.

We announced briefly, in a postscript to our morning edition of yesterday, that another of those terrible calamities by fire which too frequently startle the community, had occurred in State-street at an early hour that morning. Our reporters have since obtained further and fuller particulars of the unfortunate affair, which we subjoin:

A fire broke out in building No. 12 State-street, about 2 o'clock Friday morning. It was a most destructive one. Three women and two children were burned or suffocated to death, and another woman, badly burned, was conveyed to the New-York Hospital, where she still lingers.

The building—a four-story brick one,—was occupied by a family on each floor. The first floor was occupied by Mr. MACOMBY, with one adult child; the second floor by Mr. HENRY LUZ, with and four children; the third floor by OLIVER D. VANDERBURG, wife, two children, and the mother and sister of Mrs. VAN. namely, Mrs. CATHARINE PEACOCK, aged 50 years, and Miss MARY PEACOCK, aged 18 years. Mrs. BROWN, with her nephew, aged 9 years, lived on the fourth floor. JULIA BECKER and a girl named RACE—both Germans, and in the employ as servants of Mr. LUZ, and a newly-married woman, named Miss BECKER, slept in the attic.

The fire originated in the basement, but in what manner has not yet been ascertained. It was first discovered by Officer CORNELIUS DWYER, of the First Ward Police, who immediately gave the alarm, proceeded to the premises, and endeavored to effect an entrance.

The Fire Department had some difficulty in finding the place, owing to fog situation, and the fact that the Hose being stashed within the building, were not visible at a distance.

Previous to the arrival of the firemen, the street door had been forced open, which, by increasing the circumference of air, gave an impetus to the flames, which then rushed up the stairway with astonishing rapidity, cutting off all escape by that means from above.

As it was known that none of the inmates of the house had made their escape by the front entrance, the greatest excitement prevailed among the large number of persons, who, notwithstanding the hour, had assembled. The firemen worked as energetically and soon succeeded in cutting off the progress of the fire from the basement to the second story.

At least such was their aim, but to do so, Engineers HAULUK and FARNHAM forced their way up the first flight of stairs. On reaching the first landing they stumbled over something which at first they supposed to be some burnt furniture. Mr. HAULUK on stooping down to, ascertain the character of the obstruction, clasped in his hand the skull of a human being, burned almost to a crisp.

A shudder was then prompted, when was revealed the horrid sight of the remains of two women and a child lying in the third story completely off, and the house adjacent and blackened. One of the women was crouched up in one corner with the child lying beside her. The other was extended in the opposite corner. Both the unfortunate victims in attempting to escape from their sleeping apartments to the street were stopped by the flames and smoke on the lower landing, and there perished. The three bodies were conveyed to the lower room upon the first floor.

The fire in the meantime continued to burn and spread upon and around the upper staircase and through the rooms on the third and fourth floors. As the firemen succeeded in subduing the flames, they kept pushing their way further through the house. The body of Mrs. BROWN was found in bed on the fourth floor; she was in a sleeping condition, and died apparently by suffocation and without pain. The effect of the heat and water upon her body gave to her skin a singular appearance. When touched, it peeled off. A female somewhat about 9 years, a nephew of Mrs. BROWN, was also found dead in bed on the fourth floor. He too seemed to have died of suffocation. The body presented the same features as did that of Mrs. BROWN.

Miss BECKER, who slept in the garret, succeeded in making her way down stairs to the first landing, and was rescued by Mr. PETER PAYNE. She was shockingly burned, and was conveyed by the police to the City Hospital. She was not dead at a late hour last night; but it is believed she cannot recover.

The other inmates succeeded in escaping by jumping from the windows to the balcony beneath, and some of them, we have to learn, have been injured.

Mr. MACOMBY, wife and child, who resided on the first floor, and Mr. LUZ, the occupant of the second floor, with his wife and children, all succeeded in escaping without unharmed.

Mr. VANDERBURG, wife, and infant child, escaped through the third window to the second-story balcony below.

Mrs. PEACOCK, her daughter, Miss PEACOCK, and Miss BECKER, a boarder, all slept on the attic story and in the same room. Miss PEACOCK reached the third story and got out of the front window in the same manner as did her sister and brother-in-law. She reached the balcony but little injured. Mr. and Mrs. VANDERBURG were both, however, severely injured, having each sustained a fracture—Mr. V. of arm and Mrs. V. of the leg.

Mrs. PEACOCK, followed by her grandchild, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. VANDERBURG, aged five years, and Miss BECKER, continued their progress down stairs with a view to escape by the front door to the street. Miss BECKER reached the first floor and was taken out dreadfully burned. The grandmother and grandchild perished on the landing of the first flight of stairs.

Mr. VANDERBURG's escape was a miraculous one. He says that a short time before the alarm of fire was given he had occasion to get out of bed when he remarked to his wife that there was a smell of smoke. He did not consider, however, that there was just reason to suppose that there was a fire in the house, and again got into bed. He had scarcely gone to sleep again, when he was alarmed by the cry of "fire!" given in the house. He hastened to his apartments and opened the door of the front room in which he slept, when the smoke came in so rapidly as to induce him to close the door again instantly. His wife then raised the window to get air, but the smoke came in so rapidly as to threaten suffocation. He told his wife to keep with the children, close by the window, and he would leap first out on to the piazza.

Mrs. VANDERBURG did as directed, holding her infant in her arms, and her elder child, aged five years, standing by her side. Mr. VANDERBURG says that just as he crossed his leg out of the window to spring down, he heard his child ALMEDA exclaim, "Where's grandma?" and at that instant he lost sight of her in the smoke. He fell on the piazza. His wife then ventured out the window and dropped the infant, which he succeeded in catching. Before he had time to move again, his wife threw herself out of the window, falling heavily on his back. Mrs. V. broke one of her ankles by the fall. Miss PEACOCK escaped through the window with scarcely a bruise. From that time Mr. VANDERBURG neither heard or saw anything of his elder child nor wife's mother.

Mr. LUZ, the occupant of the second floor and lessee of the building, says he retired to bed about 11 o'clock. His two servant girls left his rooms at the same time. He thinks they went directly to bed, but cannot say that they went again to the kitchen, where the fire is believed to have originated. He was awoke by the alarm of fire, and spring out of bed and opened the door leading to the entry, but was forced by the smoke to close it again. Finding it impossible to escape by the entry, he opened the front windows and took his family out on the piazza. He continued to cry fire for assistance, when some persons came and broke open the front door. The smoke then rushed quickly up the front of the house on the piazza, compelling him with his family to retreat to the roof of the adjoining premises, from where they were all removed unharmed.

Julia Hermann states that she was awakened by hearing fire cried within the house. She found that there was a good deal of smoke in the house, and pulled her companion, RICA, out of bed. By this time the smoke became so thick as nearly to strangle her. She managed, by holding her breath for a time, to force her way to the third floor, closely followed by RICA, and crossed Mr. VANDERBURG's front room, from the window of which she jumped to the piazza beneath. Julia did not see RICA after she parted with her at Mr. VANDERBURG's room.

PETER PAYNE, residing at No. 49 Whitehall-street, states that at the time the alarm was given, he was standing in front of his house, talking with a policeman. He, with some two or three other persons, ran to the house, No. 12 State-street, and discovered smoke issuing therefrom. He ran to the front door, which he forced open, and entered. He entered the building and ascended the stairs, but on looking up the smoke he discovered a woman struggling amid the flame and smoke in an effort to reach the door. He ran to her assistance and took her out. She was badly burned, and the Police conveyed her to the Hospital.

Other incidents and statements, equally interesting concerning this sad and unlucky affair, could be given, and space permitting we now say we do.

The following is a list of the dead:

1. Mrs. PEACOCK, aged 50 years, a native of England.
2. ALMEDA VANDERBURG, aged 6 years, born in New-York.
3. Mrs. CATHERINE ANN BROWN, aged 30 years, a native of England. The husband of Mrs. Brown is in the employ of the New-York and Savannah Steamship Company, and was expected home the very day on which his wife lost her life.
4. A nephew of Mrs. BROWN, aged 9 years, a resident of Staten Island. Mrs. Brown was recently on a visit to some friends at Staten Island, and had returned to the City on Thursday, bringing her little nephew (the deceased) to spend a few days with her.
5. RICA, a servant of Mr. LUZ, aged about 18 years, a native of Germany.

Coroner HILTON held an inquest on the bodies of all the deceased yesterday. A number of witnesses were examined, but nothing additional to the facts given above were elicited. Nothing calculated to throw light on the origin of the disastrous fire was produced. Verdicts were rendered in each case, that "the deceased came to their deaths by fire at No. 12 State-street, on the morning of Friday, October 19."

The building in which the melancholy affair occurred is not damaged to an amount exceeding $500. The furniture of the inmates was damaged to the amount of about $300. Mr. LUZ's is insured for $500 in the Jefferson Insurance Company, which will more than cover his loss.

The Fire Marshal will make a rigid inquiry as to the origin of this deplorable calamity.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE

By Telegraph to the New-York Daily Times.

Interesting from Mexico—Matamoras in the hands of the Revolutionists—Fighting at San Louis Potosi.

NEW-ORLEANS, Friday, Oct. 19.

The steamer Nautilus arrived at this port to-day, with later dates from Brazos.

Matamoras had surrendered to the revolutionists without giving battle, and matters there were quite tranquil.

At San Luis Potosi, a fight of three days duration had taken place, but the city still held out, the revolutionists having only gained possession of the field of battle. Reinforcements had been sent from Monterey.

Exhibition of the United States Agricultural Society.

BOSTON, Friday, Oct. 19.

Arrangements for the great Exhibition of the United States Agricultural Society, in this city, next week, are nearly completed, and everything promises a brilliant display. The grounds are beautiful, and are daily visited by thousands of citizens and strangers. The entries of stock are very large, and embrace some of the finest animals in the country. Quite a large number of cattle and horses have already arrived. If the weather is favorable it is calculated the exhibition will surpass anything of the kind ever seen in this country.

Letter from Mr. Brisbane.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: It is very rarely that I reply to attacks; but the disgraceful and brutal assault committed upon me on Thursday evening, and the garbled statements of the press, merit this time a passing notice.

The founder of the club, which has caused so much talk lately, is S. P. ANDREWS, Esq., a gentleman of a superior mould, and an old and esteemed friend. I called upon him on Thursday evening and found him very ill with a hemorrhage of the lungs. He requested me very particularly to go to the club and state that he was seriously indisposed; for he thought people might imagine he stayed away from fear. He requested me also to state briefly the objects which he had in view in organizing the club. Although I dislike very much addressing promiscuous audiences with whom there is no unity of opinion, I went and explained briefly those objects.

The first was to open a place for social meetings of the people, and for their amusement and instruction. They cannot find these at home, being too poor to invite and not fashionable enough to be invited.

The second was to unite a band of reformers, who recognized what Mr. ANDREWS calls the sovereignty of the individual, that is to say, who place the sentiment of individual conscience, intellectual liberty and self-reliance, above the prescriptions of social and political institutions. I added a few remarks on the existing state of moral matters in our midst. I then left the stand and went to the rear part of the room, where there were some crowding and noise. I accosted one of the Captains of Police, a Mr. TURNBULL, it appears, and asked him whether he could not induce the people to leave quietly, as Mr. ANDREWS was not present to attend to the meeting. He immediately seized me in a brutal manner, seeking evidently a chance to show his zeal, forced me down stairs, and conducted me to the Eighth Ward Station-house.

On appearing before the Mayor, he questioned Mr. TURNBULL as to what offence I had committed. He answered that I had made remarks which had, in his opinion, an immoral tendency. Now it appears that a citizen of this commonwealth can be seized by the police, and dragged to a lousehouse station-house and incarcerated all night, because one of the members of said police considers that he made remarks which did not accord with his notions of morality!! I shall test in our Courts of Justice whether such brutality, violence, and a denunciation of individual rights, are legal.

To sum up, I went to the Club and made a statement of its objects to oblige a sick friend. In my opinion, the great reforms to be effected in society relate to political economy, that is to credit, the currency, commerce and banking. We must strike down the privileges of capital and elevate labor. I feel a sympathy for all reforms, and particularly those proposed by Mr. ANDREWS, but they do not, it seems to me, break up the basis of social injustice; as a radical reform in the relations of labor and capital only can do this.

Yours truly, in haste, A. BRISBANE.

Pennsylvania Election.

From the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

The returns, official and reported, from all the counties in the State, make the majority for PRIGMIRE, Democratic Candidate for Canal Commissioner, over NICHOLSON, about 18,000. There are also about 6,000 votes for WILLIAMSON, 3,700 for OLMVER, 600 for MARTIN, and 2,100 for HERBERSON—in all about 12,400, so that Mr. PRIGMIRE's majority over all the candidates is about 1,100.

But the scattering votes are not given in the published official returns of many of the counties, so that it is impossible to say positively whether there will be a clear majority for Pigmer.

The Legislature will undoubtedly stand as follows: Senate, 17 Democrats to 17 Americans, &c.; House of Representatives, 65 Democrats to 35 Americans, &c.

☞ Rev. Dr. PENNINGTON addressed his congregation on Free Love last evening. He took for his text, John iv., 16, He whom thou now hast is not thy Husband.

CITY POLITICS.

City and County Nominations.

NOMINATION OF A TICKET.

The nominating Convention of the Republican Party for the City and County of New-York, convened last evening at No. 510 Broadway.

The differences which existed the previous night were amicably adjusted, resulting in the nomination of the following ticket:

Comptroller—Asariah C. Flagg.
Sheriff—Anthony J. Bleecker.
County Clerk—Douglass Laffingwell.
Street Commissioner—James Dewey.
Commissioner of Repairs and Supplies—Jacob L. Dodge.
Corporation Counsel—William Curtis Noyes.
Governor of the Almshouse—Rue Lockwood.
City Inspector—John H. Griscom.
Judge of the Supreme Court—Edward P. Cowles.
Judges of the Superior Court—Murray Hoffman; Lewis B. Woodruff.
Judge of the Court of Common Pleas—Cambridge Livingston.
Justice of Marine Court—Chas. E. Birdsall.
Coroners—John Ives, Alanson S. Jones, Charles Mirsing, Theodore DeCamp.

Considerable opposition was manifested against the nomination of Mr. Dewey for Street Commissioner.

Daniel Ewen was proposed by Hon. John P. Cummings, and D. D. T. Marshall by Leeman Sherwood, but Mr. Dewey was retained by a close vote.

Various substitutes were proposed by the friends of several aspirants for public favor—as candidates for the nomination of Coroners, but with no success.

After the adoption of the Ticket, nine cheers were given for Wm. H. Seward. Preston King and other nominees of the Republican Party were repeatedly cheered. C. C. Leigh of the Ninth Ward, presided, Messrs. Watts and Berry acting as Secretaries. The Convention adjourned amidst great enthusiasm about 10½ o'clock.

German City and County Convention.

The Convention met last evening at 8½ o'clock, at Mechanic's Hall, Christie-street. Mr. W. Letzeiser presided. The first business was to elect a Committee of Five to attend to the finances of the concern. After this had been accomplished, Mr. P. Merkle, on the part of the Committee of Conference with the Half-Shells, submitted his report and read the ticket nominated at the Convention. The name of Mr P. G. Molloney was received with universal hissing.

A Committee of One from each Ward was appointed to report a complete City and county ticket from those already nominated. The Convention then adjourned for an hour.

Meanwhile we were amused to observe the eager working among the delegates and members of the Committee, of Mr. Daniel E. Sickles, by whom, through Mr. Merkle, the whole business of the Convention was controlled during the evening. Other non-German Democrats were also present, prominent among whom was Tom Dunlap.

About 10½ o'clock, the Committee reported the following nominations, which were adopted, one by one:

Sheriff—James C. Willett.
County Clerk—Richard B. Connolly.
Coroners—H. N. Wilhelm, E. D. Connelly, Wm. O'Donnell and Robt. Gamble.
Comptroller—Philip W. Engs.
Street Commissioner—Henry H. Howard.
Commissioner of Repairs and Supplies—A. S. Seiah.
City Inspector—Thomas K. Downing.
Corporation Counsel—L. B. Sheppard.
Judge Supreme Court—James R. Whiting.
Judges Superior Court—Michael Ulshoeffer, Jonas B. Phillips.
Judge Common Pleas—J. R. Brady.
Justice Marine Court—David O'Keefe.
Governor of Alms House—C. Godfrey Gunther.

The latter is the only difference from the Half Shell ticket, Mr. G. being substituted for Mr. Molloney. Mr. Engs was but barely sustained, Mr. Flagg being much more acceptable to the Germans.

Mr. Meckle, flushed with victory, then made an attempt to get the Convention to indorse the Liquor Dealers and Half-Shell State ticket, but it was decidedly "no go." It was then resolved to hold a mass meeting, and the Finance Committee, together with the officers, were directed to see to it. The Convention then adjourned.

☞ The Reformers of the Fifteenth Ward have nominated the following Charter and School ticket:

Otis D. Swan, Whig, (Thirty-ninth District,) Councilman.
John Brady, K. N. and H. D., (Fortieth District,) Councilman.
J. L. Mason, Whig, Commissioner of Schools.
Fred. Lewis, Inspector of Schools.
J. B. Varrum, K. N., E. N. Beadle, Whig, and Houghtailing, K. N., as Trustees.
The K. N.'s had adopted the same ticket.

☞ A meeting of the Young Men's Democratic Club was held last evening, when there were elected for officers, for the ensuing year, the following gentlemen:

President—General Elijah Ward.
Secretaries—John B. Fogerty and George S. Byron.
Corresponding Secretary—Alexander C. Morton.
Treasurer—Benjamin S. Hart.

The election for Vice Presidents was laid over till next meeting, Messrs. Fogerty, Alcott and Mead being appointed as a committee to present a list of candidates.

The Twenty-first Ward Soft Shell Convention have nominated the following officers: Councilman—Fifty-fourth District, John J. Mullen; Fifty-fifth District, Chas. H. Haswell; Assessor—Jas. Murphy; School Commissioner—Edward B. Fellows; School Inspectors—Nicholas Fisher, John Kinsly; School Trustees—James Ward, E. T. Rogers, Thomas McCoy, J. H. Klinker.

☞ The matter of Senatorial and Assembly nominations by the Republicans last evening was referred to the Executive Committee with power, who are to publish their action in Tuesday's paper.

☞ Councilman Wild is said to have made a speech to the Free Lovers at their rendezvous on Monday night, wherein he was, as usual, eloquent and chaste.

☞ The News is puffing Haskin for Corporation Counsel—especially commending him to liquor dealers as proved sound by his works.

☞ It is doubtful, now that the Police have interfered, whether the Free Lovers will nominate a charter ticket this Fall.

☞ The K. N.'s of the Third and Sixth Wards have nominated A. H. GRIFFINS for Assembly.

LONG ISLAND POLITICS.

Curiosities of Politics in Brooklyn.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Among the items of political intelligence from Kings County there are some things calculated to excite wonder among those not initiated, and some suggestive of stronger emotions among those who are.

The Democratic Judiciary Convention has nominated a candidate for Judge, on condition that it is not a Know-Nothing, yet the President of that Convention is also President of the most rabid Hindoo Council in the city, and last year, while running for Congress, was said to divide his time with the utmost impartiality, between German excursions, Irish balls, Know-Nothing Councils and Orthodox prayer-meetings.

The "Straight-out Anti-Fusion Whigs" have held their Conventions, and of the men engaged in them the greatest part were last year ready to fuse with any party except the Whigs. One of their candidates for Alderman is probably the only pure Whig with no other party connection, and he only because after seeking admission to every other organization in vain, he has no where left to go. (But he has been accepted at last as a Hindoo—we hear.)

Their candidate for Register is not quite so badly situated, for the Hindoos, although refusing him their nomination, have not excluded him from their councils. The name of D. K. SEAMAN is placarded as the "regular Whig nomination for Assembly Second District." For the two years past, his whole energies have been exerted in favor of the Democratic candidates for that position. As a reporter and lobby member of the Legislature, he was last Winter one of the most virulent of all those who hang around the Capitol in opposition to everything bearing the name of Whig. His main employment for years has been to oppose the interests of Brooklyn at Albany, in conjunction with his relative, he weather clerk, which facts render his election, as one of the representatives of that city, a peculiarly interesting subject for the investigation of the scientific.

REPUBLICAN.

Fourth Ward.

The Republicans of this Ward held a meeting on Thursday evening, and nominated for Alderman, CHARLES C. FOWLER; for Supervisor, ISAAC ALLEN, member Incorporated. A Committee waited upon the nominees, and they accepted the nomination.

Sixth Ward.

The Regular Whigs in this Ward have made the following nominations:

Alderman—Edwin M. Alexander.
Assessor—Thomas Sullivan.
Collector—Wm. A. Tenny.

A meeting of citizens, irrespective of party, was held at Union Hall, in the Sixth Ward, on the evening of the 18th inst., when the following "People's Ticket" was adopted:

Alderman—James G. Williamson, Whig.
Assessor—Charles E. Cornell, Whig.
Collector—W. W. Randolph, Whig.

☞ The Republican General Committee of Kings County, held an adjourned meeting last evening, at No. 28 Tillary street, Brooklyn.

Letters of acceptance were received and read from the several candidates nominated, and the following additional nominations were made:

Superintendent of the Poor—Andrew Hegeman, of New Utrecht, Democrat.
County Coroner—John Borgen, Democrat, of Gravesend.
Justice of Sessions—Chauncey Perry, Democrat, of Greenpoint.
Police Justice—Fourth District—Enoch Jacobs.

Democratic City Convention.

The Brooklyn City Democratic Convention held an adjourned meeting on Thursday evening, in People's Hall, corner of York and Pearl streets, and nominated EDWARD GARRISON as a candidate for City Judge. They adjourned without nominating Justices.

At a meeting of the citizens held in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon, a new County ticket was made up from the nominees of the Whigs, Republicans, Democrats and Americans. It is called the "Citizens' Ticket," and is as follows:

Sheriff—[illegible] H. Simonson—Whig and American.
Register—Gilbert Lott—American.
County Clerk—Jared Sparks—Whig and Republican.
County Judge—Wm. H. Gale—Whig and American.
Senator—[illegible] A. Dayton—Democrat.
Coroner—[illegible] E. Lamb—Democrat.

☞ Alderman A. S. CROWELL, of the Seventh Ward, offers himself as an independent candidate for reelection.

Blackguards Captured—Three Charters Shown Up.

BROOKLYN, BROOKLYN Co., Friday, Oct. 19, 1855.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The Hindoos of this County held a secret Convention lately, and nominated a County ticket. There were all sorts of candidates and all sorts of interests represented at said Convention; and after it was determined, by ballot, who the successful candidates were, a terrible row ensued, and declarations were rife: "You have nominated your candidates, now I'd like to see you elect them." "I'll be d——d if I'll go the ticket." "I have done with Hindoeism forever." "If the 'dark lantern party' hasn't missed it to night, then I'm a fool."

Hindoeism has fallen in Richmond. Since the County nominations were made, three of their councils have thrown up their charters, and returned their minutes and private books to the Great Mogul, Barker. These councils were the cream of the Order here, and numbered about two hundred and fifty or three hundred men; and all who belonged to them, have determined to oppose the "dark lantern" Love Feast nominees. NEW-YORK CITY.

Nineteenth Ward School Troubles.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Oct. 17, 1855.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In this morning's TIMES, under the head of Public Schools, is an article respecting the troubles of the Board of Trustees of Nineteenth Ward, which is incorrect. The true cause of all the difficulty grew out of the appointment of some teachers said to be Catholics. Several attempts have been made by a few of the School Officers to dismiss them, the last by entering on the minutes of the Board a report that dismissed two teachers and reduced the salaries of two others (being all that are suspected of Catholicism) so low that they would have to quit. The report spoken of was not "adopted" by a quorum of the School Officials, consequently no teachers are dismissed or salaries reduced.

S. M. DREW, Trustee of Nineteenth Ward.

Primary School wanted in the Second Ward.

At the present time there is no Public School in either the Second or Third Wards. There is a large number of small boys and girls living in these wards who might be much benefited by the establishment of a Primary School in the Second Ward. It should have three sessions per day. Two of two hours each, from 10 o'clock till 12, and from 2 till 4, with an evening session of three hours from 6 till 9 o'clock.

Over one hundred small boys, mostly newsboys and their friends, were turned away in a single night from the Fourth Ward Evening School last week.

☞ The Police of the Fifteenth Ward, yesterday afternoon, distributed the prizes won on their late target excursion. Officer WM. ROSS, as the best shot on the occasion, chose the valuable gold watch presented by Mile RACHEL. Officer SCOTT, as the second, an order for a suit of clothes from the proprietor of the New-York Hotel. And so it went on, there being two or three prizes for each of the men.

As Ex-Recorder TALMADGE truly said the other evening, the Police of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Wards form the élite of the force, and of these there is none better than the Fifteenth Ward, under their worthy Captain, DILKS. Their drill was very fine, and we were assured on Wednesday by an old military man, that he had never seen a better disciplined body of citizen soldiers. The residents of the Ward are lucky in having such good guardians.

☞ We saw at BRADY's, yesterday, a beautifully executed Ambrotype of Dr. KANE and his co-navigators in the Arctic Seas.

By the way, the Ambrotype has suddenly come into great favor with the people, and very deservedly. It gives a positive picture, like the Photograph, not a negative, like Daguerreotype. Taken on glass, and in a shorter time than when the chemical is spread upon silver, the lines seem sharper and more delicate; and backed by a dark ground, the picture does not require to be so carefully held with reference to the light, for it to be visible from all points. Our advertising columns indicate the rush.

☞ We are frequently asked to witness the capability of contrivances to sustain persons in the water. Yesterday, in company with a Committee of the American Institute, we went to observe the use of one of Thompson's "Patent Graduating Life-Preserving seats." The thing is admirably simple and effective. It is just nothing more than an ordinary schoolboy's stool, constructed of half-inch deal; one of the feet allows the stool to open laterally by a hinge, to endose and clasp the swimmer, and both feet of the stool are strengthened internally by a broad triangular foot of cork, of which also the seat is constructed internally. That is all.

FUNNY.—To see a colored man in the service of his despotic Majesty, the "Nephew of his Uncle," walk down Broadway, dressed in the naval uniform of France, strutting past the ragged free negroes who frequent the doors of the stores at the lower end of the street, and casting contemptuous side glances at his "called brethren," as he wears before them an arm bearing the recognition by Le Roi Franco of his naval services, in the shape of the golden stripes of a corporal on board S. A. J.'s vessel, La Grandeur.

☞ There was a great deal of all day yesterday for hats, overcoats, &c., but on Thursday night at the Police Lectures upon the Free-Love fete, it is wondered whether, now that this sect is broken up, Mayor WOOD may not be induced to stir up the gamblers we spoke of a few days since, and the lottery agencies in town.

Omnibus.

The Grand Jury last evening held an extra session by gas light, and did not adjourn until a late hour. Those who were allowed a look in the witness room saw a large number on the anxious seat. A few hours will show the object, as to-night the present term of the Court of Sessions expires by limitation.

☞ The "Church of the Holy Zoara," (Dr. BELLOWS', Unitarian,) on Fourth-street, is gaining well towards completion, as far as the body of the house is concerned. With its stack of brick and stack of Caen stone, it is certain to arrest all attention. The New-York correspondent of a Maine paper mentions that Mr. HENRY GRINNELL will, at his own expense, undertake the responsibility of finishing the spire, which, according to the original plan, was to be 267 feet in height!

FROM TEXAS.

Depredations of the Indians, &c.

The Austin State Gazette announces that a Democratic State Convention will be held in Austin on the 16th of January next.

The same paper sub joins the following extract from a letter from New-Braunfels, dated Sept. 22: The Indians are still near this place. On Thursday and Friday night last, they stole most all the horses on the Cibolo, and in the Mountains above here. The murder of poor MARSCHER, in his own house, you very probably have heard of; his skull is entirely broken. It seems to have been done with an axe. The whole family, consisting of MARSCHER's wife, daughter and son-in-law, are in jail, and RINCKE (the daughter) stated that she held the candle while the deed was committed. The mother bears most of the guilt, &c.

The Austin Texas Times of the 20th ult. says: The Indians have been unremitting in their exertions to break up the settlements on the upper Guadalupe. Judge WILLIAM E. JONES, a resident of that region, has been spending a few days in Austin. The danger from the Indians has become so imminent that some families have removed temporarily from the upper Guadalupe, among the number the Judge's. He has directed a letter to Governor PEASE, detailing the Indian depredations, and the operations against them for some weeks back.

A letter to the Corpus Christi Valley and Advertiser, from Suh Patricio county, says: "It is verbally reported that the post at Fort Merrill is to be shortly abandoned, that orders to this effect have received some time since from the War Department; and that Gen. Smith, not conquering in the interest, has continued this post on his opinion of its importance."

The Indianola Bulletin of the 5th inst., says: "The business of the season has now fully set in; hundreds of bales of new cotton are daily arriving, and every schooner and steamer that comes into the bay is laden with merchandise, all foreshadowing a very early and active fall trade."

The San Antonio Texan says the Indians on the frontier are now seen with their bodies painted, denoting a declaration of war. Their object has been, heretofore, plunder; now it is plunder and death without mercy.

The Victoria Advocate, of the 20th ult., says: We are informed by the Rev. JOEL T. CARR, just arrived from Goliad, that Mr. BARTON PECK, who lives on San Antonio river, about twenty miles above this place, went on express last Tuesday, informing the citizens of Goliad that there were Indians in his vicinity, and requesting assistance. A company, we are informed, started in pursuit on the following day.

The Richmond Sun learns from the chief engineer of the Harrisburg Railroad that the Company have concluded to extend the road to the West, on the Richmond side of the Brazos river.

The Late Desperate Fight between the American and British Boats and the Chinese Pirates—Letter from Sir John Bowring.

We published yesterday a lengthened account of a desperate fight that took place near Kulan, between British and American boats and Chinese pirates. The account itself, as told in foreign papers, reflects the highest credit on the gallantry of our officers and men engaged in the affair. In addition to the honor so justly and emphatically accorded them, we have great pleasure in publishing the following Letter from Sir John Bowring, Governor of Hong Kong.

GOVERNMENT OFFICE, VICTORIA,
HONG-KONG, Aug. 7, 1855.

SIR: I have received a report from Commander FOLLOWNS, of her Majesty's steamer Rattler, on the subject of the late attack on the Pirate Fleet in the neighborhood of Kulan, in which report he speaks in the highest terms of the brave and noble conduct, and the cordial coöperation of Lieut. FRENCH, his brother officers, seamen and soldiers, whom you had the kindness to send for the purpose of affording their valuable assistance in the suppression of those piratical outrages which have become so intolerable on the coasts of China. I deeply regret the loss of life and the sufferings of those who were engaged, but I beg you will present my hearty thanks to Lieut. FRENCH, and all those who served under him, and that you will allow me to express to yourself my sense of the ready and most important aid you so cheerfully rendered on this occasion.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servant,
JOHN BOWRING, Governor of Hong Kong.

To, Capt. WILLIAM J. MCCLUNEY, commanding the U. S. steam frigate Powhatan, Hong Kong Harbor.

From the Friend of China we find the following correct detail of the Powhatan's division engaged in the action:

First Launch—Lieutenant R. B. Pegram; Boatswain, Geo. Briley.

Second Launch—Lieutenant Henry Rolando; Master's Mate, Samuel R. Craig.

First Cutter—Master Ed. T McLauley; Assistant Surgeon, Albert Schriver; Assistant Engineer, Mortimer Kellogg; First Lieutenant Jas. H. Jones, Commanding, U. S. Marines.

The same paper gives the following list of Killed and wounded:

ON THE SIDE OF H. B. M. S. RATTLER.

KILLED—John Massey, gunner, R. M. A.; George Mitchell, able seaman; James Silvers, carpenter's mate.

WOUNDED—John Lindsay, R. M. A., burnt severely; David Lloyd, R. M. A., burnt severely; Richard Clark, slightly wounded and burnt; James Poulter and John Earle, able seamen, burnt severely; James Pratt, R. N. C., burnt badly; Wm. Robinson, gunner, R. M. A., contused head.

UNITED STATES BOAT DIVISION.

KILLED—Joseph A. Halsey, landsman, of Newark, N. J.; Isaac Cox, landsman.

WOUNDED—Lieutenant Pegram, contusion hand; Lieutenant Rolando, burn of hand; John Pepper, seaman, mortally; Smith Adamson, marine, gun-shot, dangerously; John Pennington, landsman, fracture of left clavicle, and burns; Saml. Mellard, marine, burnt very severely; Fred. Hammell, marine, burnt very severely; F. Waldermeimide, marine, burnt very severely; Joshua Lewis, seaman, burnt very severely; Wm. Parker, Geo. A. Cole, seamen, burnt very severely; Chas. Tingwell, seaman, contusion wounded.

ALBERT SCHRIVER, Assistant Surgeon.

John Pepper, seaman, died a few hours after the action.

The wounded were taken to the Rapid, and on the morning of Saturday transferred to the Rattler, on board of which ship they were brought to Hong Kong.

OUR RELATIONS WITH DOMINICA.

THE INTERFERENCE OF FRANCE AND ENGLAND.

LETTER FROM GEN. CAZNEAU.

From the Washington Union.

The frequently referred to, made to our relations with the Dominican Government, and the contrary representations by some of the opposition journals to the Administration, concerning Gen. CAZNEAU, for the purpose of effecting injuriously the Administration of President PIERCE, have induced Gen. CAZNEAU to place at our disposal the facts and documents contained in the following communication. We invite careful attention to them, as containing matters of no little interest.

The Dominican journals of Europe have largely reported the operations, in concert, which have taken place between the Dominican Government and the Commanders of the French and English fleets, in the recent difficulties which had occasioned with the Dominican Government, but which, which was otherwise, not with by the desire to preserve for the commerce of American citizens in the relatively fewer any attack on the favored people or national protectors of our republican Union, and as probably welcome whenever made to give the World know, the difference over the European blockade of their country.

If such a thing exists, as an "American system of policy," the Dominican Republic has the right to claim on the friendly notice of our Government, and at the satisfaction of many friends of humanity, who are the importance of the [illegible] American commerce; the dire [illegible] expressed with no [illegible] "great knights of the [illegible] no American source can, and which we [illegible] statement will overlook—that this neglected Republic is the only territory in the whole circle of West India islands under American rule.

This military foothold of American authority is struggling for life against the attempts of European to reduce it to a mere dependence.

THE GREEK MERCHANTS.

Events in the Liverpool Corn Exchange—Rise of the Greek Merchants, their History and Prospects—Effect of the War upon the Fraternity.

In the great Exchange-Room of Liverpool there stands a large barometer, round which, as a kind of demi-oracle, crowds of corn merchants and dealers may be seen gathered on "speculation days." The dealings of the chapman, in certain seasons, are greatly influenced by the rise or fall of this great weather clock. It enjoys a reputation, indeed, somewhat akin to that of the Horse Guards' clock in London, whose kind old face must be familiar to many Americans, looking across the pleasant Gardens of St. James, straight into the chamber where ALBERT and VICTORIA sleep. They have—these great dials—commend a reverenced faith, which MACGREGOR and BRIGHAM YOUNG might envy. Dark were the fears then it awoke in many believing minds to find that, for some months past the barometer of Mercery fell with strange and startling rapidity on each recurring market-day. What were at first fears of scarcity rose into fears of famine. It became not a question of bad weather and high prices, but the worst weather and highest prices. Suspicion was at last roused; the Committee of the Exchange set a watch, and it was discovered that an oracle had not spoken, but "a bull," who was speculating largely for a rise, had elevated the indicator with his finger, thus making it appear as if the mercury had fallen in the tube. The discovery has created an intense sensation, not alone in the Liverpool 'Change, but in Mark-lane and all the great Corn Exchanges of Europe; and it was freely asserted, publicly and in the city article of the Times, that it was a planned device of the Greek merchants, who were known to have heavy interests involved. Three of the body at Liverpool—Messrs. FRAMBERAMI, SCHILIZZI and PAPAYANNI—addressed at once a letter to the Times denying, on the part of their countrymen, the contriver impeachment. But, though there is much faith in Greek cunning, there is little in Greek truth. The Committee of the Liverpool Exchange, though unable legally to prove them guilty, refused to indorse their innocence. This affair has excited so much attention throughout commercial circles in Europe as to awaken a deep curiosity to know somewhat of the character and extent of the operations of the Greek houses, which, though yet young, are found already to surpass in range, enterprise and prescient judgment, most of the oldest commercial houses of Europe. A sketch, for which we happen to have the most accurate material, will, on this account, be, we are sure, not alone deeply interesting to the commercial community on the other side, but to our own, among whom several Greek houses have already risen.

The Greeks have establishments at Constantinople, Smyrna, Syra, Broussa, Teheran, Odessa, Galatz, Ibraila, Vienna, Marseilles, Trieste, Alexandria, Liverpool, Manchester, St. Petersburg, New-York, New-Orleans, Rio de Janeiro, Calcutta, and many points of the globe; and while on the one hand they supply Western Europe with the seeds, grain, silk, fruits, drugs, spices of the East, they supply the East with the manufactures of England and Continental Europe, with coal, iron, hard ware, and coffee, with tea, indigo, &c.; in fact, form the main link of civilization between Asia and Europe by controlling the main springs of commerce. This immense exchange of produce is carried on by a handful of men, who chiefly spring from the Island of Chios, which during the wars between Greece and Turkey became the refuge of the best class of Greek merchants, and this island from enjoying immunity from war became the hot-bed of Greek enterprise. Beginning with founding houses along the coast of the Adriatic, Mediterranean and Black Sea, and sending peddlers and agents all over Persia and Asia Minor, they succeeded, by activity and perseverance, in securing a firm footing in the chief markets of the Levant, and their operations gradually became so extensive that they had to send agents to Manchester and London to superintend transactions, which had become too important to be manageable by correspondence. How these agents gradually grew into the giant houses of RALLI, SPARTALLI, ARGENTI, SCHILIZZI, BALTAZZI TANVOCC, and RENOUTSANNI, is one of the most brilliant episodes of the commercial annals of the 19th century. Ten years ago the name of a Greek firm was a novelty on London 'Change; now their names have become a household word, and there are some Englishmen who have absolutely achieved the miracle of pronouncing correctly some Greek names. The wildest traditions of the ancient Phoenicians are tame compared to the Herculean performances of these modern Greeks. The RALLIS and SCHILIZZIS come to 'Change with whole crops of silk, of grain, of tallow, linseed, figs and raisins for sale with the same nonchalance as jobbers here bring to the hammer a lot of French goods. On the one hand, they advance money to the Russian or Wallachian land owners, to secure the acquisition of the Agricultural produce of the soil; on the other, they enter into contracts with the English and French speculators, who purchase the grain in anticipation of the millers' demand. Shrewdly watching both the disposition of the land-owners and the caprice of the speculators, and profiting by the vicissitudes of the one and fluctuations of the other, they set this giant lever of interchange in motion, having both ends controlled by men of adventure and genius and who, being all imbued with the same spirit, work into each others' hands. The agent at Odessa or Galatz possesses the same minute knowledge of the character and peculiarities of the landowner he has to deal with as the agent at London or Marseilles does of those whom he has to control. The same completeness of arrangement and organization preside over all their business management. While they find every palmetto of the spinner of Spitalfields and Macclesfield, of Lyons and St. Etienne, and follow every throb of the French silk goods market, in New-York, in London, in New-Orleans and Paris, they follow with the same laborious watchfulness the threading of the silk worm in Broussa or Cephalonia; and it is this astounding intellectual ardor, grasping with its fold all conflicting elements of climate, markets and every form of vicissitude, and with keen, comprehensive eye descrying every change in the commercial atmosphere, and acting on it with the rapidity of lightning, which has acquired for the Greek his great reputation for business genius and sagacity. On the one hand, you see them scrutinizing the fancies and consulting the tastes of the Turks or Persians who buy their Brazil coffee and Chinese tea, and seeing what pattern of dress, or species of article suits their requirement; on the other, you see their agents in the manufacturing districts of England preparing goods in precise harmony with the idiosyncracies of their Oriental customers. The same military discipline in execution pervades the spirit of all their agents, who, being of one race, one tongue, and in many instances one family, cooperate together with marvelous harmony and wondrous esprit de corps. Indeed the power of association is, perhaps, the great element of success, that power which contributed so much to the greatness of the ROTHSCHILDS, the BARINGS, and almost every large establishment on the Globe. Several brothers or friends of divers gifts, but animated by one purpose, and, in the main, by one spirit, as all these instances illustrate, can achieve great results. The Greek houses we have named are all so many distinct and separate establishments, but not one of them could have realized what they have accomplished, were it not that several relatives or friends had grouped together to give to the establishment that compactness, which gives it that strength, on which is built that which determines the credit of the world's money markets—moral confidence—confidence in the solidity and solvency of houses organized with such harmonious power and conducted with such mental vigor. This confidence it is which opened to the drafts which the agent at Constantinople draws on the agent at London, the way to the discount chambers of Lombard and the parlor of the Bank of England. The good will of the Bankers of the European money marts being obtained, their admirable organization and managing tact received still an additional strength by the power they held of realizing at any moment almost any amount by drawing upon any of their houses abroad. The great Viennese banker, SINA, is a Greek himself, and has realized an immense fortune by becoming one of the mediators between the European bankers and his Greek friends. But the FOULDS of Paris and other great houses soon courted the clientelle of the Greeks, and afforded them many financial facilities where circumstances rendered them necessary. But, on the whole, they leaned solely on their own resources, and the moral confidence which rendered their drafts upon each other negotiable in London. In Corn crises, at peculiar periods of pressure, and at times of difficulty of the Bank of Constantinople, the Bank of England was prone to reject their bills, especially as the wretched condition of the Turkish finances, with which the Bank of Constantinople was involved, rendered connection with it apparently dangerous; but only apparently, and even then only to those who misunderstood the character of the connection. The sequel showed the uneasiness occasionally evinced by the Bank of England, and CAULIFFE OF OVEREND was wholly without foundation, as crisis after crisis came, and while English and German houses crashed and tumbled, the Greek houses stood the storm firm and erect. The only failure of moment which ever took place among the Greeks was that of CASTELLI; but he was considered more of an Italian than a Greek, and a man, moreover, of ferocious speculative appetite, without any of that wary craft and wholesome caution which distinguish the Greeks proper. Among them in London are all manner of RALLIS, big and little RALLIS, but the RALLIS are the RALLIS BROTHERS, of London, Constantinople, St. Petersburg, Calcutta and Manchester, who are understood to have amassed enormous wealth. But almost all the houses have been most prosperous, and they have become so numerous in London that even outside of Finsbury Circus, a snug little area near Finsbury-square, in the gap between the end of Broad-street and the beginning of the City-road, where they originally settled, and still reside and keep their offices, they may also now be found. Indeed, in Broad and the streets clustering round the Exchange, it is scarcely possible to pass by an office without seeing some such classic name as PETROCOCHINO, or MAVROGARDATO, or some other name of similar Romaic pompousness. They have built a Greek Church, which they support very liberally. In politics they are intensely Pro-Russian, which has made them of late most unpopular in London. Personally they are more feared than loved. Like the Jews, they possess a genius for business which commands admiration, but, like them, they are full of finesse and cunning meanness, which beget distrust. But, with one as the other, much allowance must be made for peculiar intensity of nature and that selfish, wrap-up in themselves and what belongs to them, which seems to be more or less peculiar to all tribes with Oriental blood.

To support their own religion, their own race, their clique, their common interest and ambition, the Greeks are capable of the most sublime acts of devotion and self-sacrifice; but though they are ready to adapt themselves to those among whom their lot is cast, their sympathy rarely extends beyond the circle of their families and their business affiliations. But, although wholly devoid of that peculiar generous sympathy which the high-toned American and British merchant takes in the affairs of mankind, the influence which their industry has exercised upon the civilization of the East was one of decided beneficence. Opening fresh outlets for the agricultural produce of Turkey, Egypt and Russia, they have largely contributed to ameliorate the condition of the laboring masses. As an instance for the great demand for labor which has sprung up through the immense exportation of Greek merchants of cereals, from Wallachia, we find by the last mails, that the Governor of those Provinces has applied to several German States, and offered large bounties to an immigration of peasantry. They have also awakened a taste for European refinement and culture by the exchanges between the silks, fruits and spices of the Russians and Turks, and the tasteful wares of France and England, while at the same time, the Armenians and Turks drawn from the interior to assist at the sales of the Bazaars of Pera, when they return, awake a spirit of curiosity by the relation of all they had seen, and thus produce, even in the impassable Musulman or indolent Persian, something like a healthy impulse of emulation.

The present war may interrupt this peaceable development of the East. The capture of Sebastopol, where many Greek houses were established, must have inflicted serious loss on their trade, and the procrastination of the war may give a serious shock to the stability of the Greeks. Yet their past history shows great power of endurance, and we should not be surprised to see them weathering the storm in comparative safety. They have made themselves, too, within the past few years less dependant on the East by establishing houses on this side of the Atlantic. However, their strength lies more in the moral confidence they have inspired in European bankers, than in their own financial resources; their existence hangs on the preservation of that confidence.

THE FREE-LOVERS' TROUBLES.

Hearing at the Mayor's Office.

Albert Brisbane Discharged—Harland and the Hendersons Held to Bail.

The arrest of the Free-Lovers at No. 555 Broadway was the talk of the town yesterday. It was announced, on the committal of the parties on Thursday night, that their hearing would take place at the Jefferson Market Police Court, at 7½ o'clock yesterday morning. Our Reporter rubbed his eyes and took an early start, and at the Market found a great congregation. But everybody, the witnesses included, had their labor for their pains. No hearing was had there.

It appeared afterwards that special orders had been dispatched to Capt. TURNBULL of the Eighth District, by Mayor WOOD, to take his prisoners to the City Hall, where his Honor himself would attend to their cases.

At 9 o'clock precisely the party left the Station-house and proceeded to the Hall.

Mr. BRISBANE, Mr. HARLAND and the two HENDERSON's had all remained in prison during the night, and complained bitterly in the morning of the coldness of the cells, and were much disgusted at their contracted accommodations. A carriage was procured to convey the four, and their especial friends.

At a few minutes past 9 o'clock, the Mayor arrived, and was immediately closeted with Mr BRISBANE and Capt. TURNBULL. His Honor heard both sides of the story, but was convinced, from BRISBANE's representations, that there was no sufficient cause to hold him to answer, and accordingly ordered his discharge. No testimony under oath was taken, nor did His Honor deem this necessary. He held that the only charge that could be brought against BRISBANE was that of uttering inflammatory and seditious language, inciting to riot. On this ground he did not see fit to hold the prisoner, and Mr. BRISBANE accordingly walked out doors, complacent and comfortable.

On the way out, BRISBANE fell into brisk conversation with Capt. TURNBULL; denounced that officer in set terms for his interference; declared that he had no right to arrest him; and threatened to proceed to all extremities in testing the merits of the case in a legal way. The Captain invited him to proceed.

Afterwards Chief MATSELL came in and went direct to the Mayor. Mr. WOOD instructed him to place the head-quarters of the Free-Love Club under strict Police surveillance, commencing last night. His Honor also turned to the few reporters who were present, and remarked, for publication, that the Club was an institution of immoral tendency,—that it was his opinion that it should be broken up,—that there was already vice and iniquity enough in the City,—and that summary measures would be taken with this organization in case of any further disturbance of the public peace. His Honor was very strong in the expression of his sentiments, and was distinctly understood to be anything but a Free-Lover. We noted his remarks, and shall take care to note his future proceedings in this curious affair.

The Chief having duly retired, with his orders entered in a small note-book, the Mayor's private room was cleared for the transaction of other business. The remainder of the arrested party were put on their trial before Justice OSBORNE, in the outer room.

Captain TURNBULL put in the following affidavit:

CHARLES S. TURNBULL, Captain of the Eighth Ward Police, being duly sworn, says: That about 9 o'clock last night, he arrested THOMAS HARLAND, now present, in the act of fighting with ISAAC COCKERAIN, and making a noise and disturbing the peace at No. 555 Broadway, fourth floor, and upon deponent's arresting said HARLAND, he called the assistance of Captain KIESNER, to whom he gave said HARLAND into custody; deponent further says, that JOHN HENDERSON and BENJAMIN HENDERSON, then and afterwards interfered with deponent and Captain KIESNER in the discharge of their duty, and attempted to rescue the said HARLAND from custody, and called upon the crowd there assembled to aid in rescuing said HARLAND, and both of said HENDERSONS used abusive and threatening language towards deponent, defying his authority and otherwise conducting in a very disorderly and noisy manner, and disturbing the peace. CHAS. S. TURNBULL.

Sworn to before me, Oct. 19, 1855. B. W. OSBORNE, Police Justice.

THOMAS HARLAND, the gentleman of the Free-Love party who "held the bag," was first called. He responded, demanded a hearing, but was required to provide bail in the sum of $300 to appear and answer. Mr. E F. UNDERHILL again rushed out to get a man who had money, and again returned unsuccessful. It was a considerable time before bail could be procured, but two gentlemen of means were finally waked up and did up the bonds handsomely. So Mr. HARLAND went away, comparatively happy. He had his private funds restored to him, amounting to $235, but left the balance, belonging to the club, ($108,) in the hands of the police. That little sum goes to Mr. ANDREWS.

The HENDERSONS—JOHN and BENJAMIN—found bail readily, and likewise appeared by counsel. All these parties were summoned to be present, and ready for examination, at the Mayor's Court at 10 o'clock this morning. It is understood that Captain TURNBULL has subpœnaed as witnesses in his own behalf ex-Alderman HART, Councilman RIDDER, and some other persons well known in these parts. The charge against HARLAND, as we stated yesterday, is that of assault and battery upon ISAAC COCKERAIN. The HENDERSONS are under arrest for resisting officers in the discharge of their duty, and for an attempt to rescue HARLAND.

The future movements of the Free-Love Club are not precisely determined. Mr. S. P. ANDREWS, whose name has been prominently connected with the enterprise, is still prostrated with hemorrhage of the lungs, and is very low. Without his assistance, the Club can hardly be resuscitated. It is, however, rather problematical whether the stated gatherings of the body will be any longer permitted to take place at the "old stand." The business, from all we can learn, will be removed to some locality more eligible where "attractions" shall be free from molestation. The public character of the performances will probably be changed to a more select circle elsewhere.

The order for a Police surveillance of the premises will prevent any further disturbances. It is not the intention of the officers to make another regular descent upon parties who may chance to congregate at No. 555, but to watch the course afterwards. The groups who meet there in the afternoon will need to be very circumspect, discreet, and quiet. All this they undoubtedly will be. We believe a regular class in Dancing is the order of each afternoon; the teacher is a young French lady. The Police arrangements will interfere seriously with this affair, as well as some others.

Mr. Hodgkins's Humble Prose.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

They say H. W. BEECHER has $125 a night for his lectures at the West. Probably some believe it.

TROY, Oct. 18.

I not only believe the above to be true, but think it to be so; and more—that in addition to his receiving $125 per lecture for 12 lectures, all his expenses are paid each week; and more yet, that he can make other receipts from other sources.

Christening of a Mountain by the Senior Classes of Amherst and Williams.

Correspondence of The New-York Daily Times.

WILLIAMS COLLEGE, Wednesday, Oct 17, 1855.

For a few years past it has been the custom of the Senior Class at Amherst College, to make a geological excursion under the direction of Prof. HITCHCOCK, and to christen some mountain with appropriate ceremonies. The mountain selected this year to be thus honored, was Walnut Hill, near Shelburne Falls. As this mountain is nearly midway between Amherst and Williams, a very courteous invitation was extended to the class of '56 in Williams College to be present as the guests of the Amherst Seniors at the christening, on the 16th inst. This invitation was accepted. On Monday afternoon the Seniors of Williams bade a brief farewell to antiquity, and embarked in large mountain wagons. The road lies over the Hoosick mountain, and is very difficult and somewhat dangerous, and, emphatically, a "hard road to travel." But with much singing of college songs, and exploding of broad jokes, and many stories of murders and apparitions, as we wound through dusky ravines, time passed rapidly, and we reached Charlemont and there tarried for the night. The Hoosick Tunnel was visited on the way, and pronounced a decided bore. The original direction is not preserved; workmen are now engaged in clearing away a spot for the re-commencement of operations. About 9 on Tuesday morning the Williams party approached East Charlemont, the appointed place of meeting, when they were greeted with hurrahs by the Amherst boys, which were heartily returned. A song of welcome was sung, and, with music from the Shelburne Falls Band, the classes, followed by a large concourse of spectators, proceeded, on foot, toward Walnut Hill. This is a bald peak about 1,500 feet above the sea-level, commanding a view hardly inferior to that obtained from Greylock. Prof. Hitchcock remarked that there was a view of 150 miles in some directions. On the summit, a platform had been erected, on which were seated the speakers of the day, and around were gathered the two classes, the lads and lasses of the Shelburne Falls Academy, and a crowd of the country people. The mountain was christened with appropriate remarks by Mr. HERRICK. Pocumtuck is the name, which was inaugurated with loud cheers, and, inscribed on a streamer, may still be read from the valley. A geological essay was delivered by C. H. HITCHCOCK, son of the Ex-President, and a poem by Mr. CLARK. These exercises were interspersed with songs, composed for the occasion, and sung by the Amherst class. An amusing colloquy (followed between an Indian and a Yankee, regarding the propriety of giving an Indian name to a Yankee mountain. Prest. STEARNS and Prof. HITCHCOCK made remarks, regretting the unavoidable absence of Prest. HOPKINS, and welcoming the Williams Seniors. These remarks were received with hearty cheers, and the two classes clambered down hill and started for the Shelburne Falls Hotel. A substantial repast was furnished here by the Amherst boys, and the rival institutions shook hands together across the social board. Various toasts were proposed by Mr. ELLIS, of Amherst, and replies were made, among others, by Messrs. GOODWIN, HAND, BLOOMER, HITCHCOCK and CLARK, of Amherst. CLARENCE SMITH responded for the Williams Class of 1856, J. GARFIELD for the Literary Societies, H. E. KNOX for the Williams Quarterly. After appropriate music, the company broke up, and were soon ready for the crowning pleasure, a levee given by the young ladies of Shelburne Falls Academy. Then Amherst and Williams contended for the fair. Soft eyes rose bloom, and golden curls are mirrored with our recollections of the evening. To describe is impossible.

In the morning, the two classes separated with many expressions of good will; Amherst for Bellows Falls, Williams for home. To the Amherst boys many thanks are due for their hospitable entertainment and kind attentions. Next year Williams will have the pleasure of reciprocating.

The occasion was exceedingly pleasant, and the whole excursion in the highest degree successful.

C. Van Rensselaer's Reply to Commodore Stockton.

The following is the reply of Dr. VAN RENSSELAER, author of A Review of the Camden and Amboy Company's Report on the Accident of the 30th of August, to the letter of Commodore STOCKTON:

TO COMMODORE R. F. STOCKTON.

BURLINGTON, N. J., Tuesday, Oct. 16, 1855.

DEAR SIR: A singular sort of a letter appeared in yesterday's Ledger, purporting to be addressed by yourself to me. The only difficulty I have in answering it, is that of engaging in a controversy with a person who seems to be so unscrupulous an adversary. But, the public will expect from me, under the circumstances, a reply to this Commodore of the American Navy, in some measure worthy of his descorts. If the Company's Report was a blunder of the brains, the Commodore's letter is a blunder of the passions. So far as relates to its various epithets and insinuations, freely used in a rough, marine and thoughtless manner, it might be allowed to pass off with its own noise. But, as the communication affords a better opportunity than could have been expected of giving another public rebuke to the famous Company which issued that famous Report, (famous for its stoicism, famous for its reasoning, and famous for its statement of facts,) I do not at all regret the occasion that invites a reply. I shall use plainness of speech, knowing that seamen, like yourself, appreciate openness and honesty; but I shall not impeach motives, or follow the foolish example of calling hard names. The personal abuse you have seen fit to lavish upon me can do no harm. If your reputation can bear giving the abuse, I venture to hope that mine can bear taking it.

The letter is clear proof that my Review has hit the mark. The only homage to its truth which you seem capable of giving it, has been rendered; and that is, it has deeply stirred your anger. This ebullition I regret for your own use. It is doubtless hard for a person in your position to realize that his conduct is not beyond the truthful criticisms of persons who, in the discharge of duty, are unterrified by the face of man; but, my dear Sir, the lesson administered to you, although a hard one, and received so unanimibly, will probably have a permanent effect. I have observed, that the hardest lessons, when well learned, are the longest retained.

Every statement in the Review I take satisfaction in publicly reaffirming. The remark about the Indians, which has given you some uneasiness, I do not retract. It is my firm belief that there is not a tribe in North America whose sachems, sitting around their council fires, would fail to express sympathy under similar circumstances. If the sachems, however, were to become incorporated, they, too, might learn to follow the example of white men, and to suppress the humane instincts, for which nature pleads. I never intended to impeach the private sympathies and sorrows of yourself, or of your associates. I believe that you are all "honorable men" and equal to the average of railroad managers anywhere. But your Report demonstrates that when men act together in a corporate capacity, they will say and do things which they would be ashamed of as private individuals. Your letter, in contrast with the document of the corporation, is an example.

The eagerness with which the disaster is alluded to, or sneered, in the Company's report, is very different from the feelings of humanity expressed in your communication. Why, then, my dear Sir, did you advocate the erasure, as is reported, of the few words of sympathy that might have been the redeeming trait of the document? You say that it was partly on the ground of "good taste." I must be permitted to reply that the excuse is as unfortunate as the offence. What school of culture inculcates the sentiment that the kindly feelings of our nature are out of place in a public document! Or, was it because you were apprehensive of being "accused of hypocrisy, of shedding crocodile tears, of insulting the mourner with professions from mercenary motives!" My dear Sir, when did sympathy, properly expressed, ever insult a mourner? In a community, anxious, under the oppression of a severe public disaster, to seize hold of anything creditable to their great railroad company, such puerile and unmanly fears are an impeachment of the character of others as well as your own.

In one part of your letter, however, I understand you to say that the Report was a business document, drawn up only for the directors. If so, there was no danger of the imputation of "crocodile tears;" for surely among yourselves, and around your own table, you have not so far lost social confidence in each other as to be afraid to mingle your sorrow with that of the community. But your document for the Directors was also intended for the public. It was printed in pamphlet form, and sent by mail to different individuals, to myself among others, and published in almost all the papers of the neighboring villages and cities.

The dread of "insulting the mourner" was a plea for the want of feeling in the Report, as also inconsistent with what you say about the Directors immediately "repairing to the scene of the disaster and manifesting their sympathy for the sufferers." If you were not afraid of imputations upon your humanity, on the spot of the accident, when the excitement against the Company was at its height, what reason was there for suppressing it, through fear of misrepresentation, in a document prepared twelve days after? Besides, the suppression of sympathy in an historical account of the transaction, indicates a calculation on the subject not easily reconcilable with the ingenuous, frank, spontaneous rising of the emotion. You were, however, bent upon vindicating the Company from all responsibility in the disaster; enough, your motives in attempting such vindication were free as liable to perversion and mockery as the expression of sympathy. This calculating suppression of sentiment at a time when a feeling of general commiseration pervaded the whole community, indicates the unwillingness of a general admission from the Company, and very creditable to its reputation. You disingenuously, and from sordid motives, as it now appears, lost the opportunity of establishing the public mind, for at that time a small amount of sympathy would have gone very far to relieve the Company. But, as is often the case with calculating persons, a blunder was committed, which your letter cannot now cover over. "It is worse than folly," said a distinguished statesman, "it is a blunder." Sir, the deliberate omission of human sympathy in the report was, as a mere matter of calculation, a gross and disastrous blunder. As a matter of morals I need not allude to it, in addressing one whose temper shows him to forget not and pardon.

Your letter carefully abstains from examining my strictures upon the fatal want of diligence, vigilance and precaution which were so clearly and scrupulously practiced" on the day of the accident—the blackness of the report, which will hang in the ears of the Directors as long as they live. Nor do you allude to the deficient regulations of the Company, that may be practiced every day, to the peril of thousands of human beings.—What can clergymen know about railroads?" is your indignant inquiry, just as if railroads ought to be managed on any other principles than those of common sense, and which commend themselves to the public mind generally. The regulations allowing express trains to meet each other in motion on a single track, and to run backwards at high rates of speed, are condemned by all classes and conditions of men, and by the managers of at least many other railroads.

You mistake in saying that my three strictures are simply "an impeachment of your mode of managing a single track. A single track, laid out in a great thoroughfare, is susceptible of a comparatively safe management under sensible rules, framed to meet its peculiar requirements.

The Report of the Company being a public one, you have no right to find fault with any person for venturing to review it, unless his review contains errors. It will not do for men in your position to cry out "What business have the clergy to investigate these matters?" not to mention the fact that clergymen are as liable to be killed as others, as this very disaster painfully proves. They you to understand, sir, that clergymen have the same civil rights as other persons, and that they have not divested themselves of any of those rights, as citizens, which you yourself enjoy. This pusillanimous attempt to excite prejudice against the clergy, is in keeping with the whole tenor of your letter, and with the general administration of the Company's affairs. If there is any man in the community who may be supposed to take an interest in the protection of human life, it is those who are habitually called upon to contemplate the momentous issues involved in its destruction. If my review contained anything unchristian in its spirit, I should deeply deplore it. Those who have read it must form their own judgment. I shall claim my right, as a Jerseyman, to discuss the subject of railroads, in all proper methods, whenever I may see fit, and especially whenever a great emergency arises, like the present, which spreads mourning through many families, with some of which I am personally acquainted.

The accusation that my Review was written for the purpose of creating a prejudice against the Company, and of anticipating the decisions of justice, is very preposterous when coming from the Company, whose one-sided and elaborate report of the disaster was circulated far and wide in newspapers and pamphlets, just before the Grand Jury of Burlington County met. The Review was intended to expose the misstatements of that unjust and ungenerous report, and to let its authors know that public sentiment cannot be outraged with impunity.

In your letter the attempt is made to escape from offering to compromise for damages, with the unfortunate sufferers, on the ground that "you have not been able to overcome the decencies and proprieties of civilized and Christian men." The public will be glad to learn this, for the unfeeling tone of the Report had produced a somewhat contrary impression. But I must be allowed to add, Commodore that the announcement that you still claim such decencies and proprieties, occurs under circumstances that make some six lines to understand it. Do you not know, Sir, that suits have been already instituted to recover damages for the destruction of human life occasioned by your mismanaged train? And yet you publicly and heartily reflect upon the bereaved, and by plain implication characterize their efforts to secure justice as though their object was to "obtain money as the price of blood." These are your words, Sir. And is there any "decency or propriety" in volunteering such calumny in the position occupied by you just at this crisis? Whatever may be your private sentiments on this subject, to which you have a perfect right, it is amazing that judicious friends should not restrain you from going on in this suicidal manner. I understand that several of the Directors were advised by the President of an influential company, to set aside a considerable amount of money, and to compromise, privately, all pecuniary claims. But this counsel was not followed. Your letter, however, condescends to admit that a "gratuity" may in certain cases be properly tendered. Sir, the sufferers in this calamity ask of you no "gratuities." Their object is not your "dimes" and dollars, but the just maintenance of their own rights, and the protection of the lives of their fellow-citizens. An appeal to the treasury of your corporation in the name of law, and not "gratuity," appears the most effectual method of securing these ends. Rely upon it, Sir, your Company has nothing so much to dread as the administration of justice by the tribunals of the land.

You conclude with expressing the hope that your letter "may not be considered arrogant and defiant." No, Commodore, it is too humiliating to be "arrogant" and too harmless to be "defiant."

I am, with consideration, your fellow citizen of New-Jersey, C. VAN RENSSELAER.

The Templars Again—Their Constitution and General Laws.

A short time ago we printed the ritual of a new organization known as the Templars,—we, to-day, present the Constitution and General Laws of the Order, as also a copy of a letter sent by the Grand Officers, and to which their names are appended. We publish them as a part of the secret history of the times. This subject derives additional importance just now from the fact that various members of the O. U. A.'s will shortly be expelled from that organization, on the ground of their connection with the Templars.

THE LETTER.

To be read in Temple No. 1.

NEW-YORK, April, 1855.

To T(emple) No. (1): The regular quarterly meeting of the G. T. was held at Onderdonk's Hall, on April 3, 1855.

A new ritual entire was adopted, which is in the hands of the printer, and will be ready for delivery to T's. entitled to receive it, by paying therefor 25 cents for each copy. Each T. is entitled to two copies. The copies of the old ritual must be returned before the new one can be delivered.

The new Constitution is now printed ready for delivery. Each T. is entitled to two copies by paying 25 cents for each copy, and returning all copies which they may have of the old Constitution.

The T's. are requested to pay five dollars for their charters, which should be immediately forwarded to the Grand Secretary, with the names of the charter members, on receipt of which the charter will immediately be delivered.

The new passes were given out at this session. T's. which have not received it will be put in possession of it upon payment of the regular quarterly assessments, which is a sum equal to two cents for each member's name on the S's. books on April 1.

The entire private work has been changed. The grand officers and deputies will immediately put the T's in possession of it.

The G. T. adjourned sine die in great harmony. There are 84 T's. in this State and about 10,000 members. Fraternally,

J. B. BACON, P. G.
A. S. BARNETT, G. V. P.

All communications should be addressed to J. BULLOCK, Box 636 New-York Post-Office.

CONSTITUTION

AND

GENERAL LAWS

OF THE GRAND TEMPLE

Adopted, March, 1855, New-York.

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

This shall be known as the G. T. of the State of New-York. Without its sanction had control, no T. shall exist in this State. It shall also act for the present as the G. T. of the U. S., and shall exercise jurisdiction over the whole U. S. until the G. N. T. shall be formed, the manner of forming which shall be directed by this G. T.

ARTICLE II.

This Order is organized for the purpose of concentrating the efforts and the influence of the patriotic young men of our land to further the following principles:

1. The promotion of American interests against all foreign influence of every kind.

2. Opposition to Roman Catholicism, as a political and social institution, to the utmost extent.

3. The revival and reinstatement in our country of the honesty, practicism and principles of '76, and to that end an ever-hallowed remembrance of the glorious deed of "the men that tried men's souls." &c.

4. To act politically with the great National American Party, aiding to elect its candidates, and working to carry out its principles; and should, unfortunately, this party become Globocratic, disorganized, or recreant to its high trust, then itself to take the field and carry on the battle for American rights, American principles, and American candidates, until its labors shall be crowned with victory.

ARTICLE III.

SEC. 1. The G. T. shall be composed of three representatives from each T., who shall be elected, one every six months, and each shall hold his office for eighteen months, except those who may be elected to fill vacancies in the regular terms.

SEC. 2. The representatives shall be elected from the S' members, by the S' members, at the first regular meeting of the G. T. in June and December.

SEC. 3. The present representatives shall agree among themselves which shall serve till July, 1855, which till January, 1856, which till July, 1856. In case of their non-agreement, their T. shall decide.

SEC. 4. One-third of the whole number of representatives shall be elected every six months.

SEC. 5. All members of the G. T. must have passed their degree.

SEC. 6. CLAUSE 1. The G. T. shall have the power, by the vote of all its members present, to expel a representative upon charges presented and sustained by three members, after fair trial being given, and the witness examined on oath.

CLAUSE 2. In such an emergency, the P' members of the T. shall have power, by a majority of those present, to remove such representatives by bringing proper charges against him.

SEC. 7. Every representative shall, before his admission, present his credentials of election, signed by the President and Secretary of his T., which credentials shall have the seal of the T. affixed, and shall have the signatures of election annexed, stating the number of the votes cast for each person in nomination, and the number of votes cast for each. No brother shall be admitted without such certificate and return. STORE is to be a brother who successfully contests the seat of the brother who holds the said certificate and return.

ARTICLE IV.

SEC. 1. The officers of the G. T. shall consist of a P. G., G. V. P., G. S., G. T., G. A. and G. I. G. They shall be elected by a majority of the members of the G. T. present.

CLAUSE 2. The officers of the G. T. shall hold office for six months from the regular quarterly meeting, viz. the quarterly meeting of January and July.

CLAUSE 3. Three officers shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

ARTICLE V.

SEC. 1. The G. T. shall have power to make general laws to regulate the instituting of new T's, and the grading of officers.

SEC. 2. The G. T. shall decide all appeals from brothers of a T., and from a T., and shall, by means best, prescribe a form of appeal.

SEC. 3. The G. T. shall rule upon the qualification and worthiness of the Committee appointed by the T. in the written report of [illegible] and [illegible] rule laid down by the G. T. shall be final [illegible].

SEC. 4. The G. T. may make such general laws and regulations for T's as may be found necessary, and may alter or repeal or change the same when deemed expedient, as the Order, when tendered necessary.

SEC. 5. The G. T. shall have power to collect moneys for its necessary expenditure, [illegible] general laws, including fees for Charters, and other assessments on the G. T.

ARTICLE VI.

SEC. 1. The general meeting of assemblage of the Order shall not be held except by written permission of the G. T., or in case of his absence, or inability to attend to it, by the G. V. P.

SEC. 2. Out of the cities of New-York and Brooklyn, the P. of a T. shall have notice of the place of meeting, by mailed notice in his care, and at least one week before the meeting, but this power may be put upon the Deputy, and then with the utmost caution and greatest care. The [illegible] signal must be obeyed by every member.

SEC. 3. The G. T. shall have a regular quarterly meeting of the G. T., on the first Tuesday evening of the months of January, April, July, and October, in each year.

The G. T. may adjourn from time to time.

The P. G. may call special meetings of the G. T. on the written request of three representatives, stating such circumstances as the G. T. may direct.

SEC. 4. The forms, work, Constitution and laws, as now adopted or passed, by the G. T. for the S. T., shall be binding upon them. SEC. 5. Any alleged violation of these resolutions or laws by a member, expulsion, or proviso that [illegible] not in any way violate this Constitution, the laws, resolutions, or enactments, of the G. T., or the principles of the Order.

ARTICLE VII.

SEC. 1. To entitle a person to membership in a S. T., he must be a white male person, of least eighteen years, who were under the jurisdiction or within the limits of the United States of America, of Protestant faith, born of Protestant parents, who also must have been under the influence of Protestant parents, or who shall have been under the influence of Protestant parents, or who shall have been married to a Roman Catholic. He must be a believer in the Holy Bible, and in a Supreme being on the Creator and Ruler of the Universe. He must be free from any political, business or religious ties with foreigners. Brothers [illegible] of party to any [illegible].

SEC. 2. The G. T. shall, by general law, regulate the manner of proposing and electing members.

SEC. 3. Candidates for membership shall be elected if, on the three black balls, or adverse votes, appear against them. A person rejected shall not again be balloted for in six months.

SEC. 4. No person shall be elected or initiated, except in the T. situated in the town or ward in which he resides, if there be a T. in said ward or town.

SEC. 5. No brother who shall violate any of the principles or of the Order, or shall offend against the constitution of by-laws of the G. T. or S. T., shall be subject to reprimand, suspension or expulsion, as the by-laws may direct, as the T. determines.

SEC. 6. Every brother shall be entitled to a fair trial for any offence in writing reprimand, suspension, or expulsion; but no member shall be put upon trial unless charges specifying his offence shall be presented to the T. by a specific accusing member of the Order.

SEC. 7. The defendant may appeal to the G. T. (and need try), stating the reasons for his appeal. On the argument of the G. T. the defendant's T. shall grant him a new trial.

SEC. 8. Notice of all suspensions and expulsions shall be sent to all T's in the neighborhood.

NEW-YORK CITY.

A SPEECH IN COURT.

A Witness sent to Prison for refusing to answer the questions of the Grand Jury—More Indictments expected.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—Oct. 19.

Before Hon. Recorder Tallmadge.

The single case tried yesterday, was that of a countess, charged with robbing a man who had been employed on a trackleyer on the Panama Railroad, and who arrived at this port last Tuesday. She robbed him of $195, and some specimens of California gold. The charge was fully substantiated, and the Jury found her guilty. Sentence to-morrow.

A WITNESS SENT TO PRISON.

The Grand Jury then came into Court and presented some ordinary indictments in prison cases. Henry Hart, the pawnbroker in Chatham street, was brought before the Court, having been arrested on an attachment by order of Judge Upham, charged with refusing to answer questions put to him by the foreman of the Grand Jury. The audience became excellent listeners, and the following scene occurred:

The Recorder.—A question has been propounded to you by the Grand Jury, which, by the peremptory tone of the foreman is supposed you have cool nerve to answer. The statute in this case imposes for such a refusal the penalty of imprisonment for thirty days or a fine of $250. It is my duty to instruct you under that statute, that the question put to you was proper, and that that you are compelled to answer. Now, Sir, make your choice. Answer or not. If you decline to answer, I shall inflict the penalty.

Mr. Hart—I wish to have my counsel present.

His Honor—Do you decline to answer the question?

Mr. Hart—Yes.

His Honor—The Court decides that you are to take the ruling of the Court. The Court instructs you that answering the question cannot implicate you, because the statute fully protects you. The statute throws its mantle of protection round a witness, so that anything you may write cannot be used against you.

Mr. Hart—I wish to have the advice of counsel.

Mr. Erben (the foreman of the Grand Jury)—I would have remark, your Honor, that Mr. Hart was informed, in the Jury room, of the consequences that would result to him if he persisted in refusal.

Mr. Hart again informed the Court that he wished to advise with counsel.

The Court—This is a proceeding in which you can have no counsel. The proceedings that take place in the Grand Jury room are sacred and should not be divulged. What is your election?

Mr. Hart—I cannot answer the question.

His Honor—Enter an order that the witness be imprisoned in the Eldridge-street jail for thirty days. Mr. Clerk, make out the commitment and give it to an officer.

Mr. Hart, showing no signs of repentance, but expressing a strong desire to go home and see his family, was then removed to Eldridge-street Jail in the custody of an officer.

It is understood that the Grand Jury will come into Court to-day, with some fresh indictments against certain official parties.

Extradition Case—Charge of Forgery at Besançon, in France.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS' OFFICE.

Before G. W. Morton, Esq.

Pierre Nicholas Sucillon, claimed by the French Government under the treaty with the United States, as a Fugitive from Justice. The prisoner was arrested twice days since by Deputy Marshal De Angelis and brought up for examination. Mr. Pogliani appeared before the Commissioner. The Hon. John McKeon, U. S. D. A., Hon. Reporter Tilton and Mr. Morrough appeared for the French Government. The District Attorney produced the Warrant of President Pierce, dated at Dubuque, authorizing the United States Marshal to arrest the prisoner, on also a mass of documents from the French authorities, charging him with forgery. Mr. Charles D. Meunhion, Consul-General of France, stated that he made the necessary affidavit before Judge Betts, and that he received the documents now produced, and on which the charge is founded. Witness is not acquainted with the signature of "Antoni," except from the documents here produced. The present documents were sent to Washington, and returned to him. The depositions were read to witness and the originals, handed to the prisoner. From those documents, it appeared that the prisoner was accused of forgery, and uttering the following bill of exchange:

BESANCON, 4th February, 1855. Good for francs 2,425.

On the 5th of March next, I will pay to the order of Bastien, leather merchant, the sum of two thousand four hundred and twenty-five francs, value received on merchandise, payable at his domicil, at M. Sucillon's, 25 Rue Rabbaut, at Besançon. Good for two thousand four hundred and twenty-five francs.

ANTONI,

Signed.

Marine Bookbinder of the eighth Cuirassiers of Auxonne.

On the back is written, pay to the order of M. Schmitz, value received in cash. Besançon, 4th February, 1855.

SUCILLAN.

Signed.

On presentation to the maker he refused to pay the above and it was duly protested. On the 23d of August last, the Judge of Instruction took evidence against the accused on this and other charges. M. Schmitz was examined and stated that he had the draft from Sucillon, who stated that he was doing considerable business in supplying the French army at Verna with supplies of equipments required in consequence of a fire at that place. The prisoner disappeared from Besançon on the 16th of April, and Schmitz then instituted inquiries and found that he had negotiated three forged bills, of which the above is one, with the signature of Pierre Laurent Antoni, a master boot-maker of the Sixth Cuirassiers, in garrison at Dolce, France, deposed that he had never any business transactions with Nicholas Sucillon, but on one single occasion, about 15 or 18 months ago, when he came to see witness at Auxonne, near Dolce, in the garrison of the Sixth Cuirassiers. Witness gave him an order for leather, for 1,115 francs, for which witness did not give him any draft to order. He gave witness two drafts, which were accepted and paid at maturity, at three months. Since then witness had no business, and never saw him again. Witness denies having made the three drafts exhibited to him.

(It was on the above evidence that the warrant of extradition was granted.)

Gabriel Vallette, a French actress, was produced before the Commissioners, and examined by an interpreter. Witness knows the prisoner, and has known him for ten years, and has had business transactions with him in Paris. Sucillan was in business at Besançon. Witness knows his hand-writing, having seen him write. (Letter produced and shown to witness.) The signature Sucillon, is that of the prisoner, but not as he usually writes it, because the paper is short; but it is his proper signature. The body of the letter is also in the hand-writing of prisoner's hand-writing. This witness was cross-examined at some length, but nothing of importance elicited. The letter was dated Liverpool, 22 April, 1855, and addressed to the prisoner's wife. The witness being shown the forged draft, said he did not recognize the signature to that as the writing of the prisoner.

This closed the case. The Commissioner explained to the prisoner the nature of the charge against him, and that he was not bound to answer any questions. The prisoner then declined to answer any questions except that that he was not guilty. He also wished to have an adjournment in order to produce a witness.

The Commissioner ordered the case to stand over until next Tuesday.

LYNCH LAW ON SHIPBOARD.

Before Judge Betts, Esq., U. S. Commissioner.

The United States vs. George W. Austin.—The defendant is the master of the ship Cultivator, and was charged by one of the steerage passengers on the last voyage from Liverpool with making several assaults upon the high seas. Sylvester Russell, the complainant, stated on the 20th of September, he had a cake baked for his dinner, and after he had eaten it in the steerage, the Captain sent him on deck and told him that the cake was stolen from a woman who was crying for it, as she had no other dinner. Complainant told the Captain a girl made the cake, and he owned the sugar and flour. The Captain then took a stick and struck him with it, and knocked him down, and subsequently put a pistol to his complainant's head, and followed him into the steerage, struck him again and then scratched him for a knife. On the part of the defence three or four other passengers and the steward deposed that the complainant was charged with stealing the cake, and also a bottle of porter, from the pocket of a passenger, and that the punishment inflicted was only what the complainant deserved. To sustain this view of the case, a kind of whip made of two pieces of rope attached to a strap, was produced, to show that it was not a dangerous weapon with which the punishment was inflicted upon the culprit.

The complainant asked to have an adjournment in order to produce other evidence to show that the cake was not stolen, and therefore the infliction of summary punishment was not only illegally had under the laws, but merely wrong de novo.

Adjourned to Monday.

U. S. DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S OFFICE.

In re the American ship Maury, libeled as having guns and ammunition, contraband of war—An investigation was held at the instigation of the British Consul, when sworn affidavits were adduced, which set forth that the Maury was built by Roosevelt, Joyce & Co., in April last, after the model of the bark Penguin, and designed for the China trade; that there is nothing peculiar in her construction, apart from her rig, and she was advertised three weeks ago for Shanghai; that she has since then been taking on freight, including 300 tons of coal, a quantity of naval stores and ship chandlery, and expected to sail the coming week under command of Capt. Fletcher; that in addition to the ordinary armament of a vessel of her class she has but two deck guns, supposed to be necessary in consequence of the great increase in the number of pirates on the coast of China; that the other guns, shot, &c., on board, as per subjoined list, were purchased under an order from an American gentleman at Canton and shipped as freight. The owners also declare under oath that she has no guns or other material of war under the seal, and they finally declare that the Russians have no connection whatever with the enterprise in question.

Signed and sworn to by A. A. LOW,

of the firm of A. A. Low Brothers.

On freight ten guns, 62 boxes of shot.

Sworn to before GEORGE F. BETTS,

U. S. Commissioner.

In addition the following affidavit was made:

I hereby swear that I accompanied of the facts mentioned in the foregoing statement, and that they are true. NATH. B. PALMER.

A letter was also read from Charles Edwards, Esq., counsel to the British Consulate, which stated that it was due to the owners, after this explanation, "to lift the libel." The vessel was then released from custody.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—Oct. 18.

Before Hon. Justice Clerke.

DECISIONS.

The People ex rel. James Dunlap vs. Sarah Ann Dunlap and Eliza Jones.—This is a habeas corpus, to recover the possession of a young child, now under the care of its mother and a female friend, Miss Jones. The mother has left the bed and board of her husband, taking the child with her. The husband claims that the mother is not a proper person to have charge of the child.

CLERKE, J.—I do not think it expedient that the child should be taken at present from the care of the mother. Let the writ, therefore, be discharged without prejudice to the right of the relator to sue out another, on a new state of facts, on new circumstances.

Before Hon. Justice Mitchell.

Meyer et al. vs. The City of Louisville, Ky.—The motion of the plaintiff is denied.

Cheshire vs. Camp.—This motion was also denied, with $10 costs.

Butler vs. Wakeman.—Motion denied with $10 costs, and the defendants may enter up judgment.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., Thursday, Oct. 18, 1855.

The Railroad Depôt House at this place was entered last night. The burglar entered through a hole in the window made by taking out two 7x9 lights, and the sash between, and afterwards opening the door from inside. They broke open a desk, but found nothing to take; broke open a basket, but not being food of raw sweet potatoes, left them—passed by several bushels of wheat, barrels of cranberries, and took off into the field a box of Mr. CRUTTENDEN'S "Systematic Arithmetics." After opening the box and examining the books, they left them in the field without taking (sorry for Mr CRUTTENDEN) a single book. The Railroad Company always professed to be poor, and no doubt the burglars will now believe it. The Company always claimed that they were more successful in enlightening the Island than in enriching themselves. The burglars thought it was all a lie, and had no idea that their dry goods boxes were all filled with school books for the people. Our Fisher brought in the books from the field this morning, and they are safe. T.

Water for Brooklyn.

A special meeting of the Brooklyn Common Council was held last evening to consider the Nassau Water Company's proposition of introducting water into the city. The subject was partially discussed when a motion to adjourn for one week was carried.

BROOKLYN CITY COURT.

James F. Le Baron vs. Archibald Gatfield.—This was an action brought by the plaintiff, as assignee of Richard Saltonstall, to recover of the defendant $120 brokerage, for negotiating a loan of twelve thousand dollars on the building and lot No. 73 Nassau-street. It was proved by plaintiff that Mr. Saltonstall received from the defendant an application for the loan and left it with Messrs. Longworth & Buys, and that from them it passed into the hands of one George Hussey, who presented the same application in Saltonstall's handwriting (knowing it to be his) to the capitalist and obtained the money and received brokerage therefor, Mr. Gatfield having been previously cautioned against paying the same to him. It was attempted to be proved by the defendant that there had been no employment of Saltonstall, but the Jury believing the evidence of the plaintiff, found a verdict for the full amount claimed, being $123 50.

THE INSANE EMIGRANT POOR.

The Controversy Between the Commissioners of Emigration and the Almshouse Governors.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Commissioners of Emigration yesterday afternoon, Mr. VERPLANCK, from the Committee to which was referred the recent report of the Governors of the Almshouse, in regard to this commission, respectfully reports:

That it is alike matter of regret and astonishment, considering the opportunities and the duty of the Governors to become familiar with the facts and the law affecting the controversy between them and this commission that so many misstatements as are contained in their report should have been given to the public, and that the tone and language of such report should have been so overbearing and offensive.

It is well known that whatever may have been the matters in dispute between the Governors and the Commission, it has endeavored to observe due civility in action and words towards the Almshouse Department and all its officers. It is, therefore, difficult to account for this unprovoked attack, unless the Governors suppose that the public may not distinguish between such angry and unjustifiable assaults and sound argument warmly urged. A good cause rejects all such extraneous and unworthy aids, and your Committee in discussing the differences between the two boards, hope to avoid those peculiarities of the Governors, and will only notice them when they impugn the fair dealing of the Commission.

Before entering into an examination of the report, your Committee would suggest for the consideration of the public and the Governors this preliminary matter. The Governors, in all their discussions with this Commission, undertake, as they have done in this report, to announce the law and define its meaning. This is done in a manner so self-hand and confident as almost to carry along with it the conviction that the Governors, like the king, can do no wrong and commit no error. Yet, the action of the Governors fairly leads to the opinion that it is taken either in ignorance or contempt of the theory and the statutes upon which this Commission is organized. Nor is this Commission to blame for this want of knowledge, if such exist, on the part of the Governors. Almost a year ago, a public attempt was made to explain to them these statutes, and what was then said is now repeated:

The law of 1847 substantially requires a payment of $1 00 (six or increase to $3) for every emigrant arriving at this port in a vessel from a foreign country, and out of the funds thus raised the Commissioners of Emigration were directed to indemnify as far as might be, the several cities, &c., of the State, for any expense which might be incurred for such persons, and that such appropriations should be in proportion to the expense incurred by said cities, &c., severally. The powers and duties thus conferred were merely those of disbursing officers. The several cities, &c., were to be paid as far as the receipts were sufficient for that purpose; but no one county, town or city was to have any advantage over any other county or town or city, but each was to receive a ratable portion with the others, according to the amount of expense it had incurred. The Superintendents of the Poor in other counties, the Governors of the Almshouse in this City, and the Commissioners of Emigration, are each creatures of the law, which specifies and defines their duties. It is not for them to decide what the law ought to be, but to perform their duties under the law as it is. A denunciation of the Commissioners for not doing what the law does not direct, but in substance prohibits, is as improper and unreasonable as a refusal on the other side to perform what the statute requires.

It is supposed that, holding such relation to the law, obedience to its directions would not be made a subject of condemnation or of sneers. Yet, whenever a refusal to comply with any of the unreasonable demands of the Governor is made, because a compliance would be without the authority, or in violation of the law, the Commission is accused of resorting to quibbles.

Your Committee now propose to examine the complaints and some of the other statements contained in the Governor's report.

The causes urged against the Commission may be reduced to three points:

1. That bills for support of emigrants at the Penitentiary from 1849 to 1853, and at Blackwell's Island and at Bellevue Hospital "from 1849 to 1854, six years," amounting to $49,500, are unpaid.

Yet the Governors ought to know full well that there is neither substance nor legality in this claim. The persons for whom this charge is made were committed to the various institutions named, as vagrants; and last year this Commission presented the Governors with their views in regard to it, as follows:

The case of vagrants, as well as other cases involving imprisonment, is quite different; vagrancy, by our laws, is a misdemeanor. Men are imprisoned for it, as for petit larceny or other misdemeanors, and committed for not more than six months, and kept "at hard labor." By the sentence of the Court, they are deprived of the opportunity of earning their own livelihood, and are obliged to work for the benefit of the City. Why, then, should the Commissioners of Emigration be charged for their support, any more than for the maintenance of an emigrant sent to Blackwell's Island for theft, or to the State Prison for burglary or arson, or any other felony, "there to be kept at hard labor?"

The Commissioners are not penitentiary officers, but merely disbursing agents of a charitable fund collected to indemnify for paupers, not to pay for the support of criminals, who may, not unjustly, be known, earn enough to support themselves by the hard labor to which they have been sentenced."

With this view of the case, the Governors were not satisfied, and appealed to the Legislature last Winter. That body, the creators of both the Governors and this commission, by its action, declared that there was no validity in this claim, and utterly repudiated it. Yet the Governors, with their habitual determination and pertinacity, without regarding the Legislative action, again bring it forth, and parade it for public inspection, and when this commission invokes for justification of its disallowance of this claim the argument above urged, the few and the repudiation of it by the Legislature, it is answered only by the contemptuous reply—"it is a legal quibble."

The Commissioners have had running accounts with an average of forty other Counties in the State for the last eight years, and of them all the Almshouse Department of this City is the only one that has ever made such a charge as this, or set up any such claim.

II. The next cause of complaint is this, that this Commission has not paid bills which "have been presented," amounting to $46,412, for support of inmates of Lunatic Asylum, Workhouse, Penitentiary, Hospital, and for interments in the City Cemetery.

If this Commission, considering the great numbers chargeable to its fund, brings no bills that the entire contract on of the last five years, were to pay all the "bills presented," especially as made up according to the peculiar ideas of the Almshouse Department, it could easily exhaust the annual fund at a very early period of the year. It is, however, customary to examine "bills presented," and to compare them with the ships' manifests on record in this office, and this have been and are all such bills adjusted and liquidated by the auditor. That officer, after proper examination, has made to your committee the following report of the bills presented and adjusted, according to the rules and practice between the Almshouse Department and this body:

Balance due New-York Almshouse on January 1, 1853		$12,950 00
Amount of bills rendered and allowed for '53.		24,768 03
Amount of bills rendered and allowed for '54.		17,536 98
Amount of bills rendered and allowed from Jan. 1, 1855, to July 1, 1855		5,000 42
Amount of bills rendered for July and August, 1855, not yet examined		2,110 26
Total		$59,316 47
1853—July 6, cash	$5,000 00
1853—Oct. 5, cash	10,000 00
1853—Oct. 26, cash	5,000 00
1854—May 31, cash	10,000 00
1854—Nov. 5, cash	17,625 26
1855—June 15, interments	1,109 00
1855—Sept. 6, interments	140 00	48,774 56
Balance due		$20,741 61

Thus, instead of a proper claim of $46,412 32, the actual amount is only $20,741 61, somewhat less than one-half of the sum claimed by the Governors, and a little more than one-fifth of the general claim by them.

This Commission, in the judgment of your Committee, and of counsel, has a fair and equitable offset to this $20,741 61, and it is willing to submit it to public decision.

This offset was last year stated, and is now repeated, as follows:

The Commissioners are authorized to take care of emigrants alone. During the seven years of their existence, many emigrant females have been delivered of children in the Hospitals of the Commissioners. These children are not emigrants, but native born, and their care and maintenance belong to the Governors of the Almshouse; and the expense of taking care of them your Committee is advised, is an equitable set-off—to some extent, at least—to the claims the Governors for incurable and small pox patients. This is denied by the latter, and the Commissioners are told to send such children to the Almshouse. They are willing, and have offered to do so, provided the Governors will also take charge of the mothers, for whose expenses they are benefited. This is refused, on the ground that the mothers, being em grants, are properly inmates of the institutions on Ward's Island, and will not be received into the Poorhouse. And thus the Commissioners are obliged to be neither guilty of the inhumanity of separating tender babes from their mothers, or must bear the expense of thousands of infants, chargeable, of right, to another fund and another body."

The above has been the case for over eight years, and the amount expended for such children is computed to exceed $50,000. The Governors, however, refuse to allow it; and it is, therefore, to be a subject of arbitration or litigation. It is well worth while, however, to observe in this connection, the strong ground upon which its disallowance is placed by the honorable the Governors, and to consider whether it may not be that the quibble—the mote in the eye of this Commission—is not seen by the Governors from behind a beam in their own optics. Even, however, allowing that the Commissioners are in error in claiming an equitable allowance on this account, equal at least to the balance claimed by the Governors, still assuredly when it is considered that this unadjusted balance of $20,700 is on a long account, upon which payments of seven times that amount have been actually made, and over a hundred times that amount have been expended for the use of the City by this Commission, a little delay in settlement can hardly justify the broad charges of the Governors, that it is only from any ground, but the assertion that it will "compel this Department to call for a sum of not less than $100,000 for the special purpose of providing for the impositions of the Commissioners of Emigration not otherwise provided for."

If a deficiency in the large grants to the Governors has occurred, requiring such an additional call from the department, it must arise from "impositions" from some other quarter than the Commissioners of Emigration.

In this connection it may be well to advert to the remark of the Governors, that this Commission has paid large sums to the other counties, whilst it has passed New-York by.

The Governors know very well, yet seem studiously to conceal the fact, that fifty cents out of every two dollars received by this commission, are by express law appropriated and set aside as a separate fund out of which expenses of emigration in all the counties except New-York are to be paid. The Commissioners did not advise the enactment of this act, and are in no way responsible for it. Since its passage in 1853, no money except this fund of fifty cents has been paid the counties, and that from time to time, as the law requires. When, therefore, the Commission is reprimanded for paying the counties other than New-York, the censure is simply for the performance of a duty which the law specially enjoins.

In the next place this Commission expends for the benefit of the county of New-York an amount ten times greater than for any other County in the State, and four times as large as that paid to all the other counties together. At an early period of the Commission, it was judged by the Commissioners, Messrs R. R. MINTURN, HAVEMEYER, BERRYSH, the late Messrs. COLDEN, JACOB HARVEY, DILLON and others, advisable to establish hospitals and refuges in this country, instead of allowing the emigrants to be maintained in the City establishment. This was done after mature deliberation and calculation, leading to the conviction that this fund could be thus administered with more economy than the then experience had shown the City's fund and commenced its expenditures for the support of the Commission in this City, and of the Almshouse Department during the same time, as exhibited in the reports, will show that these gentlemen were not in error in their decision.

In this county, therefore, this Commission has purchased lands and erected refuges and hospitals; in no other county except Richmond, where the Marine Hospital, for the protection of this City from the introduction of disease is located, has this been done. In the other counties, all the emigrant poor requiring public aid are maintained in the county poor-houses. Such would have been the case here had not the Commissioners institutions of their own. The amount expended in these is therefore in effect so much paid to the City of New-York, for to that extent is this City relieved yet the Governors report as though the Commissioners who, with the exception of the Mayor of Brooklyn, are all residents and tax-payers in this City, paid nothing for the City, but were acting adversely to its claims and its interests.

The aggregate amount thus expended for the City, and to which extent it has been relieved from taxation is, since 1847, the year of the organization of this commission, over $2,250,000, and has been for the last five years at the rate of over $300,000 a year. It must be always borne in mind that the Commissioners of Emigration have no discretion as to the amount of their expenditures nor any claim on the City or State Treasury to make up deficiency or enlarge their income, but they are the administrators of a limited and fluctuating fund, raised from the emigration itself; that the Legislature never made it their duty, nor ever expected that they should support or pay for all emigrant poor under all circumstances, but merely prescribed that they should do so far as the fund would allow, either by institutions of their own, or by repayments to the counties on which such persons became chargeable. The administration of the Commission, however imperfect, has thus far exceeded the expectation of the Legislature, having, during eight years, entirely supported the whole of such poor in this City, the whole Quarantine and Marine Hospitals of this port, and refunded the counties in full to within the last few months, during which last period a division of 65 per cent has been paid.

3. The third and last point of complaint by the Governors is the refusal of the Commissioners to receive the lunatics who have been tendered, according to their resolution. On this the Governors expend a great deal of unnecessary indignation. If the spirit of fairness were as evident in the Governors' report as is their eagerness to embarrass and misrepresent the Commission, they would not have been guilty of some important misstatements which your Committee will proceed to supply.

Last Winter the Governors, in the same style as they now propose, "united themselves as a committee," and proceeded to Albany to correct the abuses in this Commission, and to amend the defects in the emigrant laws. A bill for that purpose was accordingly introduced into and passed the Assembly, without notice to this Commission. In that bill was a clause authorizing the Governors to transfer lunatics to the charge of the Commissioners, just as they have recently attempted, and of the refusal to receive whom by the Commissioners they so much complain.

This clause was stricken out by the Senate, and the whole idea of such a thing repudiated. The Governors return to New-York, and holding up the Commissioners to public view as adverse to the City—mal-administrators of the law—violators of "the legal pledge" under which they receive the commutation fund, exhibit the great respect entertained by themselves for law and legislative action, by attempting to do just exactly what the law forbids and the Legislature has but recently prohibited.

Then again, the Commissioners have no authority or right to receive lunatics. The laws of this State are express on that point. Lunacies are to be examined by two justices of the peace, and committed to such asylum as may be provided by the overseers of the poor, in this City, by the Governors. It is made the duty of the Governors to provide such place, and if a public asylum, the approval of it by the Supervisors is necessary. The Governors have not and cannot provide any of the institutions on Ward's Island, as a fit place for lunatics, such as would meet the approbation of the Supervisors, for there is no such edifice on that island. Yet, in full view of this law and these facts, the Governors undertake to transfer to an irresponsible place lunatics who have been committed to their charge by the judgment of a Court, and for whose custody they are responsible to their friends and the public. They complain, too, that the Commissioners, troubled, perhaps, by a quibble, refused to aid them in their open and direct violation of the statute.

The law thus which an act on the Governors contemplated and attempted, is misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment, and but for the resistance of the Commissioners to this attempted unlawful act, the Governors might have found themselves inmates, instead of visitors, of their penitentiary establishments on Blackwell's Island.

Your Committee having thus disposed of the claims and charges in the report of the Governors, deem it a proper time to call attention to some past matters and the action had thereon.

From time to time during the last few years, differences of opinion have arisen between this Commission and the Governors, in regard to the duties of each, and the meaning of various parts of the laws under which they acted. Committees of Conference were appointed and meetings held. A proposition was made by the Commissioners that the matter in dispute and difficulties of law, as the legal officer and advisor of the City, but this offer was declined by the other side.

Another proposition was then made and adopted, that certain points should be left to arbitration, and Hon. J. J. Coombs, who had been one of the Governors, Hon. Wm. F. HAVEMEYER, formerly of this Commission, and Judge Wm. KENT, were selected as referees; other points were on a case made, to be submitted to the decision of the Supreme Court. After this arrangement had been made, new points were from time to time presented by the Governors, with the desire that they should be included in the above arrangement. Three several times, as these new points were thus presented, this Commission consented to this alteration, and in agreeing to the last gave their consent on the assurance that there should be no more offered. This occurred last December.

As soon as the Legislature was assembled in January last, the Governors, unmindful of this arrangement, prepared and caused to be introduced into the Assembly a bill, retro active in its effect, which was to repeal, by legislation, the most material of the points which they had agreed should be decided as above mentioned. Your Committee have no comments to make upon this extraordinary movement, except to say that the Legislature refused to interpose or make any alteration in the emigrant laws except to include for the future, but not for the past, (although this was proposed, desired, and advocated by the Governors,) among those chargeable to the emigrant fund, certain classes of emigrants who might be confined after conviction as vagrants or disorderly persons.

This law thus obtained, without the matters involved in it had been made the subject of amicable adjustment, was soon followed by the commencement of an action against the Commissioners, which is now pending. Thus the Governors have taken legal measures against this Commission; but as usual, not satisfied with the law or the remedies which the laws afford, an offensive report is made from which it is fairly to be inferred that no legal steps have been adopted against this Commission, although a suit had before that report was made actually been commenced.

Your Committee, nevertheless, would recommend, and do hereby offer, if this report be adopted and approved, to proceed with the agreement of submission to Messrs. COMMINGTON, HAVEMEYER and KENT, as above stated, or to agree to any other equally competent and known disinterested gentlemen, and thus without litigation and without failing, to dispose of the matters at issue between the Governors and this Commission.

Even had the claim of the Governors been far better founded than it has been shown to be, the Commissioners, after having for the last eight years diminished the burdens of the City, and paid annually large sums directly to the Governors for the support of the insane whom they had no means of keeping, had a right to expect a kind and liberal indulgence at this peculiar juncture. It is a matter of public notoriety which must be familiar to all the Governors, that a great and unexpected diminution of emigration has occurred since January, 1855, and a consequent reduction of more than one-half of the usual income of the Commission; while the number of persons chargeable in former years and the consequent expense have increased the same. A vigorous and efficient reduction of expense, in all departments, rendered practicable by the immense benefits arising from their lately acquired Castle-Garden establishment, will, it is expected, hereafter make the diminished income quite adequate to the diminished expense. In the meanwhile, however, a period of temporary financial embarrassment in the affairs of the Commission could not but occur, and during the recess of the Legislature the Commissioners had a right to look for a confiding and generous forbearance, if not effective aid, from institutions laboring in the same cause. This they regret not to have found from the Governors.

Your Committee, in conclusion, utterly regrets these public discussions, and would have recommended silence in these matters had not the reports of the Governors been replete with misstatements, unfair imputations, unfounded claims, and angry charges. As, however, they have thought proper to submit these matters to the discussion of the public, your Committee do not decline the course of the tribunal.

The Commission has endeavored to administer the trust committed to it fairly and impartially, for the best interest of the emigrant and for justice to the entire State. When the large amount to be expended by it annually and the great numbers chargeable to the emigrant fund are considered, it is not wonderful and this Commission could not expect, but that differences and disputes should arise between those who claim aid those who pay; but from no other source had this Commission from the moment of its organization met with half so much opposition, ill feeling, want of sympathy, and misrepresentation as from the Almshouse Department of this City. This, in view of the pecuniary benefits which this City and many of its great interests have derived, and are deriving from emigration, was not expected. When, however, it is considered that this Commission has relieved our citizens of over $300,000 a year, taxation, that disease has been kept from the City—that frauds upon strangers have been put an end to—that thousands of friendless men and women have been provided with employment—that the sick have been healed, the hungry fed and the naked clothed, by hundreds, and that all these happy results have been in a measure produced by this Commission, and under its auspices, without any expense to the City, your Committee appeals with confidence to a discerning public for judgment on its efforts and its acts.

As to the immediate controversy in hand, and the charge of bad faith made against the officers of this Commission, your Committee earnestly submit to public decision what they have and what they have not done in that behalf.

This Commission has always desired and acted for an amicable adjustment of points of dispute—it offered to submit them to the law officer of the City—to gentlemen distinguished among our citizens for their intelligence, integrity and experience, and to the Supreme Court—it agreed to this last submission—consented to include points in such submission, which were scarcely mooted when an agreement for it was arranged, and it now renews the offer of such an arbitration; and in all these things it endeavored to carry out its propositions in perfect good faith and honor. The Commission has not declined the decision of the law officer of this City. It has not, when by agreement it was bound in honor to abide the decision of unexceptionable gentlemen, rushed to Albany to procure a legislative decision on matters which had been submitted. It has not, when frustrated in this, repudiated its agreement and commenced a suit for the enforcement of its claims, and then informed the public, in substance, that no legal measures had been adopted, and it has not asked the Governors either to separate new-born children from their mothers or else lose the expense of their support. These are some things which the Commission has done, and others which it has not done, and your Committee fully submit the whole matter to the public decision.

GULIAN C. VERPLANCK, Chairman.

NEW-YORK, Oct. 17, 1855.

MARKET REPORTS.

Markets—Carefully Reported for the N. Y. Daily Times.

The Tax-Gatherer of the Baltic.

In the general discussion pertaining to the entire abrogation of the dues and tolls exactacted by Denmark on ships and cargoes passing the Ore Sound and the Great and Little Belts, much curious detail is overlooked in the enunciation of the vital principle at stake. This is to be expected on a subject so very plain, and concerning the justness of which there is so very little difficulty in arriving at the conclusion which the Executive has set forth in the annual message of last December. The appearance of that document in Europe not only gave notice to Denmark that the United States meant to terminate the treaty of 1826, but also gave notice to these European States most deeply interested in the subject, that if they did not wake up, the characteristic energy and clear-sightedness of America would, in thus being forced into the position of champion and expounder of the commercial interests of the world, subtract from both the diplomatic reputation and the Mercantile States respectively held by Great Britain, Prussia, the Netherlands, and other States of lesser importance, trading in the Baltic.

Immediately telegraphic wires vibrated in diplomatic whispers across the Continent. Denmark, which threw itself upon the magnanimity of America in 1848, being then at war with Germany, takes refuge in a self-protective series of mysterious negotiations with its old friend and ally—France. Mercantile people in Prussia and the German States are in commotion, and, forgetting their business ways, talk loudly of another reduction of the fraudulent Sound Dues; and the London Times, than which no journal knows better how to run hard with the populace and hold fast with the Government, comes out boldly in review of the subject, exhibiting the veritable amounts paid to Denmark for nothing, and concludes by desiring its Government to follow the course of the United States, and give the notice of one year, agreed on by the Convention of 1841.

It is curious to observe the anxiety with which the interested European States, which have so long confined themselves to petty reductions and reconfirmations of worn-out "privileges," echo and retcho the words of President PIERCE's Message, "that we can claim exemption therefrom as a matter of right!"

The fact that they had been paying over two and a half millions rix dollars annually to the Dane, does not seem to effect their resolve half so much as that "America," as the London Times says, "by the voice of its President," made the above declaration.

It is time that by some means or other Europe should be taught a lesson of honesty in such matters, and the fact that three centuries toleration of a wrong cannot make it a right.

This question of the abrogation of the Sound Dues is the more important from another fact, not generally known, and that is—the Danish Government not only command and rule all connection between the North Sea and the Baltic, by the Sound and Belts, but also are in possession of all other means of commerce pertaining thereto. Lunenberg, one of the old Hanse Towns, and, since the Congress of Vienna, belonging to Denmark, dictates the duties on the river Elbe. The Hamburg and Berlin Railway pays taxes to Denmark. The Lubeck Railway does likewise. Transit through Holstein is subject to Danish impost, and the Schleswig-Holstein Canal is subject to the same dues that goods and ships are in the Sound and Belts.

Thus, at every point on land and sea, Danish diplomacy meets commerce with a weapon in one hand and a money-box in the other. And not alone does the Dane exact his tolls and dues and duties from ships and goods, but, after taking his own out of him, the great tax-gatherer turns over the stranger to a crowd of custom-house and other officers, whose perquisites are immense, and who are a great delay and annoyance to ships frequenting these waters.

As a sample of the charges to which skippers are subjected, we shall mention a few. A ferry-boat is necessary to take the skipper to the Chamber of Sound Dues, a distance of a few hundred yards—the cost varies from $7 to $19, according to the season. In bad weather, the boatman charges what he likes—sometimes $30. In quiet weather, he makes about $50 per day. A pilot's fee for a vessel drawing fifteen feet, $26 50 to $47, with an increase of $2 a foot after sixteen. The sum total of the perquisites amounts to over $180,000 annually. The Director of the Sound Dues has, or had in 1850, a salary of $15,960; the Clerks from $4,000 to $8,000 each; the Cashier $6,750, and the others in proportion.

Denmark is, in fact, among nations, what New-Jersey is among our States—a public pick-pocket, exacting tribute from passengers who are compelled to cross her territory.

The Perils of Ex-Governor Reeder.

The word that Ex-Governor REEDER has been murdered comes to us from the border of Kansas. Our first impulse is naturally to question a statement so unstrengthened by particulars, and so unlooked for; and, indeed, the very dispatch which conveys the tidings conveys also a doubt as to their verity. Of this doubt we claim the full benefit, perhaps more than we are entitled to, in believing that Col. REEDER is alive and well, and not unprosperous in his land speculations.

We cannot forget, however, the apprehensions which attended the last return of the Governor to the Territory; or the outrages which were said to await his coming, but which disappeared as he fearlessly approached. There is no doubt but that the animus to destroy him existed in the minds of the larger portion of the Missouri Pro-Slavery mob, and that hundreds could have been found to deal the blow, could they have been sure of responsible backing in the upshot. But the STRINGFELLOWS and CLARKS, who are so apt to bluster, insult and descend to the paltry and disgraceful use of tar kettles, feather beds and fence-rails, shrink from the commission of that more appalling crime which universal justice pronounces worthy of the gallows, and calculate the moral result, on the wretchedly immoral war they are waging, of an act so shameless and detestable. The security of REEDER has been, not in the conscience, supposing there is one, of his enemies; nor in their admiration, for they have not ceased to vilify him as a disguised Abolitionist, and a baffled land pirate; but in their fears, which saw more to apprehend from his destruction than from the repression of the thirst for vengeance. Whether these securities would have saved him until the present moment, had he remained in office, from the knife, the bullet, or the bludgeon, we would not undertake to say. Certainly every act of opposition to the pseudo-Legislature must have stirred up very dangerous symptoms among the reckless, drunken, misguided bullies who infested the Shawnee Mission.

But in accepting the nomination of the people of Kansas as their delegate in Congress, in opposition to the person selected by the Missourians, Col. REEDER once more assumes an extremely obnoxious position. His enemies know quite as thoroughly as he does that he is really the representative of the popular sovereigns. They have every reason to believe that he will be admitted to his seat as such, in preference to Mr. WHITFIELD. The question is not one that President PIERCE can determine, and which, therefore, ATCHISON can control. The Pro-Slavery Senate has nothing to do with it. But the House of Representatives, with a majority for freedom, and the right to pass upon the qualifications of its own members, must admit one or the other; and with so flagrant, and so inodorous an assertion of the idea of territorial independence as the Kansas bill has passed to the credit of that body, it is hardly credible that the reception of Col. REEDER will meet with material opposition. They know this in Missouri, and in Kansas; and while the Governor, with his veto, was comparatively harmless in his resistance to the mob of Shawnee legislators, supported as they were by the judiciary, he at once swells to enormous capacities for mischief, as the spokesman of the people, at Washington. His new attitude is even more perilous, personally, than the former one. The age of chivalry had gone when the first Missourian saw the light. They do not attack singly; they do not challenge to an equal match, with equal conditions; but mark out the victim, and surround him by dozens, and insult, and provoke, and finally murder; as they have already done in more instances than one; as they would have done to McCREA, had not his courage been too prompt and fatal in anticipating their object. Their vengeance is as cowardly and merciless as that of a South Sea Islander. It is dignified by no courage, tempered with no pity, and, when freed from the mastery of political considerations, as little to be trusted as that of a Thug. If Col. REEDER, fearless as he is on all occasions, and ready to expose himself wherever attacked, escapes these ruffians, it can only be because they are restrained by their masters, or cowed by his superior manhood. The report from St. Josephs may denote a foregone conclusion; it may foreshadow the execution of some villainous design upon the new delegate; or may be—what is too bad to expect of the border Rob Roys!—a new fact in the early history of Territorial Sovereignty. We believe otherwise; but still believe the deed possible—indeed, not improbable—and shall, upon the whole, feel vastly more comfortable in spirit when the courageous Pennsylvanian is fairly beyond the reach of Missourians and their peculiar code of honor.

General Scott's Pay.

It is six weeks since Attorney-General CUSHING rendered his official opinion in regard to General SCOTT's pay as Lieutenant-General, but the action of the President and the Cabinet thereon has not yet been officially announced. Why this delay? Is it necessary? Certain it is that the public are beginning to attribute it to motives not creditable to the Administration. Six weeks should be time enough for the settlement of a year's account of the entire army. It is a strong point in behalf of General SCOTT's claim that three Ex-Attorneys-General of the United States—Messrs. BUTLER, GILPIN and REVERDY JOHNSON—have given opinions in his favor.

The Great Achievement of Our Police.

The Police of the Eighth Ward—that Ward in which PAT HEARN's splendid establishment is located—have at last distinguished themselves,—etermed their Malakoff, and now await the rewards with which desert should ever be crowned. In their fiery zeal to do something, after going on a target excursion and shooting for prizes, they intruded themselves into the club-room of the Free-Love Association, and arrested some of the members and bore them to prison, separating husbands from their wives, and creating consternation and alarm among a company of weak-minded and not particularly embodied people. Whatever objections there may be to the Free-Love Club, in a moral point of view, we have never heard the members of that now noted Association accused of any riotous or indecorous conduct, and none of any kind was proved against the persons who were arrested.

The Free-Love people are philosophers of a very gentle external demeanor, and they have the undoubted right to indulge in their oddities, and to discuss social questions in their own way, so long as they refrain from noisy or riotous exhibitions. The great danger to be apprehended from them, and from similar organizations, lies in their very gentleness and strict conformity to external rectitude of conduct, which create a hurtful confidence in their insidious immoralities. The Police are not exactly the sort of persons that should be employed to correct the evils of such associations as the Free-Love Club. But the virtuous guardians of the public morals in the Eighth Ward, not being able to detect any wrong-doing in PAT. HEARN's, nor in any of the notorious houses in Mercer-street, made an onslaught upon the feeble folk over TAYLOR's saloon, and bore off the philosopher BRISBANE to prison. But they rather exceeded their duty on this occasion, and will probably have to suffer for their unwarranted zeal. The Eighth Ward abounds in improper houses, and, if Capt. TURNBULL and his men are so very desirous of purging that part of the City of its impurities, there will be no danger of making a faux pas if they should make a descent one of these nights on some of their friends who, according to a rumor for which we do not vouch, made them presents for their target prizes.

A Wrong Scent.

That particular, and we may add very respectable, portion of the British lion that resides in the City of New-York woke up early on Thursday, and, while snuffing the morning air, smelled something very like a rat. In fact, he was sure it was an animal of some sort, and one not kindly disposed towards him and his, so he wagged his tail twice in earnest meditation. Having decided upon the proper course to be pursued, he proceeded at a round trot to the office of the United States District Attorney, and informed him, privately, that a certain bark, recently built and named Maury, was lying at one of our docks under suspicious circumstances. She was of unique construction, and had on board several cannon, a number of cutlasses, and one or two spars. Another circumstance, and he related it in strict confidence, believing it to have an important bearing on the case, was, that several missionaries had taken passage in her for China. All this, in the opinion of John, proved clearly that the bark was intended for the Russian service; and if she was suffered to depart, he was sure the Cunard steamers would be intercepted, and perhaps all their passengers put to the sword. The District Attorney, as in duty bound, agreed that the circumstances were rather suspicious, and consequently the Maury was straightway detained and searched. John was in ecstasies. He was sure he had caught and secured a very dangerous customer from doing him harm. And so he had. For when the subject came up for investigation, it appeared clearly that those in command had no notion of harming Johnny, but had legitimate business in hand, so she was yesterday cleared of all suspicion and discharged.

Our Art Products.

The Crayon, a weekly paper devoted to subjects relating to the fine arts in this Country, is "filled with sorrow and indignation," at some remarks we made a few weeks since on our Art Products. But we do not believe that either its sorrow or indignation will prove chronic disorders. When it becomes better acquainted with the possibilities and purposes of the ornamental arts, and bestows more thought and study upon the subject, its complaints will be greatly mitigated. However desirable it may be that we should excel, or even equal the rest of the world in artistic productions, the experience of three or four hundred years has been sufficient to demonstrate that the genius of the Anglo-Saxon race is not inclined towards external decorations. We are a plain, sober, and plodding people, and but little given to gew-gaws. The love of Art is not spontaneous in the Anglo-Saxon mind but has to be tenderly and assiduously cultivated. It is different with the Italians, the French, and the Germans. What the amalgamating process now going on in this country of compounding a distinct people out of all the races and nations of the earth may end in, is a problem yet to be solved; but, while the Anglo-Saxon element prevails, as it does now, undeniably, in our country, there is but little hope for the cause of what is called "high art." We must be content with excelling in the useful arts and import our ornaments from those parts of the world where the people instinctively engage in pursuits that are repugnant to the Anglo-Saxon mind. We are paying enormous sums yearly to France for fine art productions which we have an absolute inability to produce. The productions of Sevres and the Gobelins are simply imposition to the English eye. We have produced some creditable works of Art; but while our best artists have been compelled to go to Italy to save themselves from starving, what can we hope for Art at home? The readers of the Newcomes know how the hero of that admirable chronicle of English life and manners at the present day had to suffer for his devotion to Art, how he was sneered at, slighted and contemned, and we all know, too, that precisely the same kind of treatment would be the natural consequence of any young gentleman in similar circumstances pursuing the same course on this side of the Atlantic.

FROM WASHINGTON.

General Scott's Pay—The California Senators—Collector Latham.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times:

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Oct. 17, 1855.

I perceive that some of the correspondents at this point doubt the statement that Gen. SCOTT is to be allowed the pay of Lieut. General. It is to be hoped that a few days at furthest will put an end to all doubt and suspense upon the subject, as well as to the apparently unnecessary delay which has characterized the proceedings in this case. The Accounting officers, professing doubt as to the validity of the General's claim to increased pay, submitted the case to the head of the War Department, by whom it was referred to the Attorney General for his opinion. This, Mr. CUSHING rendered five or six weeks ago, and the subject was returned to the Accounting officers, by order of the Cabinet, at least ten days since. Surely that ought to be ample time for ascertaining the amount due, if the claim is to be allowed; and if it is not to be allowed,—if the Accounting officers and the Attorney General agree in disallowing it,—surely there can be no reason for keeping the General, and the quite equally interested public, so long in suspense upon the subject.

I have full confidence in the accuracy of my information that the increased pay is to be allowed, as I obtained it from one likely to be well informed, and who has never heretofore misled me. It will be seen, too, that the course which the subject has taken confirms this view. If the Accounting officers had had no doubt as to General SCOTT's right to increased pay, they would have allowed it without hesitation; and if the Attorney General and Cabinet had agreed with them, and reported against the claim, of course the Accounting officers could have disposed of the whole case in five minutes after the papers were returned to them.

I learn further that the Auditor having charge of the business is now engaged in overhauling General SCOTT's Mexican War accounts, to ascertain what has become of about $100,000, for which the General has presented no vouchers. That is the story, at least as I hear it. The missing sum, if there is any such, will doubtless be balanced by a certificate from the State Department that it was expended for "secret service," and ought to be charged to the secret service fund. Perhaps it is such investigations as these which postpone the final announcement of the result of General SCOTT's application.

It is also possible that in ascertaining the amount of back pay due the General under his new rank, the Accounting officers are directed not to allow the increase during the period of his persecution by Court of Inquiry, at the close of the Mexican war, upon the ground that he was not then exercising the increased command of Lieutenant-General. It is possible that all the advantages of a decision that he is entitled to back pay may be frittered away by proceedings of this character; but that the rank of Lieutenant-General is held to carry back pay with it, I can scarcely doubt.

I have read letters to-day from prominent California politicians, who concede that Ex-Gov. FOOTE will be chosen a Senator from California by the Know-Nothing Legislature recently elected. It is supposed that such a consummation will not be particularly agreeable to the President and a portion of his Cabinet. Jolly, isn't it, to think of HALE and FOOTE both back again in the Senate, after passing through all the vicissitudes of defeat? There are others who believe that the Senate of California is so nearly divided, that the Democrats will be able again to defeat an election of any Senator, either in the place of GWIN or WELLER.

Hon. M. S. LATHAM has formally accepted the San Francisco Collectorship, much to the joy of the anti-Broderick and Bigler wing of the California Democracy. He will doubtless prove energetic, straightforward and fearless in the performance of his duty, regardless alike of smiles or frowns. His acceptance completely unjoints the nose of Col. B. F. WASHINGTON, late editor of the Times and Transcript, who would have received the appointment beyond doubt had Mr. LATHAM answered the general expectation that he would decline.

Washington continues quite dull. We had some hopes that Manager JARRETT of the Baltimore Museum would give us occasional entertainments in the theatrical way, as he has leased the National Theatre and announced performances one night a week. We are disappointed, however, for the excellent houses which thus far have been attracted by the brilliancy of his "stars," are thoroughly disgusted by the utter absence of decent ability in his "stock." Managers who suppose the Capital a provincial town, whose citizens are to be satisfied with fifth-rate entertainments, will find their error at last in the bottom of the exchequer. S.

Rachel.

There was a moderately good attendance last night at the Metropolitan Theatre to witness the last representation of "Adrienne Lecouvreur," by Mlle. RACHEL. The performance was admirable in every respect.

Our readers must not forget that this is the last night of the present season. The performances commence at 7 o'clock instead of 8, and are unusually attractive. The first piece will be the excessively amusing farce, "Le chapeau d'un Horloger," then "Les Horaces," then the third act of MOLIERE's comedy, "Le Misanthrope."

Academy of Music.

There will be a afternoon performance to-day, commencing at 2 o'clock. BELLINI's opera of "Norma" will be given, with LAGRANGE and HENSLER in the principal rôles.

A Turk Lecturing on Turkey.

Mr. C. OSCANYAN, a Constantinopolitan, lectured at the Mercantile Library on Thursday evening, on "Turkey." It was the first of a course of three Lectures. He traced the rise and progress of the Osmanlis, and quoted the following verse of one of their martial songs:

"Let your father hear of your daring,
Let him give chase with his brave horsemen;
No harm can befal thee,
When pillowed on the knee, and overshadowed by the dark tresses of the Turcoman girl."

Mr. OSCANYAN held that foreigners, in judging of the institutions of Turkey, are too much impregnated with the prejudices of European education to decide fairly and impartially. Life among the Turks affords the only opportunity of arriving at a correct conclusion. The failing of Turkey is centralization. Illustrations of the customs of the country, a description of the Sultan, and a promise to take the hearer next time into the sacred precincts of the Harem, formed the features of the lecture.

Eighth Senatorial District Nomination.

The Whig and Republican Conventions—two separate bodies—for Senatorial nomination, Eighth Senatorial District, were held at Hudson yesterday. Dr. JOHN DE LA MONTAGNE, a citizen of Fishkill Landing, was agreed upon by both bodies as the candidate. He was one of the Republican Delegates to Syracuse, from Dutchess County, and is a man of independence and ability.

"For he Played on a Harp of a Thousand Strings—Sperrits of just Men made Perfect."

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Oct. 18, 1855.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

"For he played on a harp of a thousand strings—sperrits of just men made perfect." I do entreat you, if it be within your power, to explain the purport and origin of the above quotation." It appeared in a letter written by the immortal BARNUM, in yesterday's TIMES. I have also seen it before, but could never discover the existence of any remarkable connection between a "harp of a thousand strings," and "sperrits of just men made perfect." NIX.

It is strange how ignorant some men are who write a good hand. The passage alluded to—"for he played," &c., is one of the finest in our language, although it is not found in the play of Macbeth, nor in the revised ritual of the K. Ns. In the connection, Mr. BRANCH certainly used it most beautifully, and the effect upon every mind on it suddenly connected in the course of the elegantly written letter must have been harmonious and soothing, for when it reaches angel groups upon a harp of a thousand strings—sperrits of just men made perfect."

Metropolitan Board of Missions.

SECOND DAY.

The Board met on Thursday morning, at 9 o'clock, and sat throughout the day. The principal business transacted was the reception and adoption of several reports on Foreign and Domestic Missions, and matters relating more immediately to the organization itself.

Considerable excitement was exhibited during the course of a debate on the conduct of the Rector of Trinity Chapel, in ordering that no collection should be made, to aid the Board, on the previous evening, from his congregation. A very animated discussion was elicited by the recommendation of Bishop MEAD (the presiding official) to take up a collection in the Church of the Ascension last evening. Dr. TYNG opposed it vehemently, but the course proposed was rendered unnecessary by the liberality of the clergy themselves. The sum of $4,600 was raised between six Bishops, twenty Ministers and one layman, being $100 more than was required.

During the morning and afternoon sessions addresses were made by Bishop MCILVAINE, Dr. TYNG and others.

The closing exercises took place on Thursday night in the Church of the Ascension, corner of Fifth-avenue and Sixteenth-street. The attendance was very considerable. Bishops LEE, MEAD, EASTBURNE and POTTER occupied seats within the Chancel. Addresses were made by Bishop LEE and several other clergymen, appropriate to the design which the Society was instituted to promote.

Earnest appeals were made for pecuniary aid in prosecuting the Society's efforts, which were represented as of the most extensive character, but not at all commensurate with the necessity that exists both at home and abroad for missionary labor.

Policemen in the Mayor's Office.

A suit which was tried on Thursday in the Marine Court, in which LUDWIG SEMLER was plaintiff and the Commissioners of Emigration defendants, develops some new features in the business in the Mayor's Office. It appeared in evidence that the plaintiff was a police officer, and had charge of the department to which emigrants who have complaints to make are referred, and their grievances considered and remedied. About the 3d of last month, two emigrants, who had lost a part of their baggage at Castle Garden, were referred to the plaintiff, who, after hearing their story, offered to purchase their claim for the lost articles for $25, and stand the chances of a suit—they agreeing to be on hand for him as witnesses on the day of trial. To this these emigrants agreed, and so Mr. SEMLER, paying $25 to them, received the assignment of a claim which, by the proof in the above suit, amounted to about $75. Certainly this is a novel mode of protecting the emigrant, and of making virtue its own reward. There used to be a standing rule of the Police Department that an officer shall not engage in any other than the legitimate business of his office; but times are altered,—policemen practice physic,—policemen report for the papers, and we never are sure but that our next neighbor, with whom we discuss the morals of our model City Administration, is not a policeman in disguise.

A Policeman that wants to do his duty.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

A long and formidable article appears, in your issue of Thursday, in which there is a severe imputation cast upon the Police. The charge is that gambling houses and other dens of iniquity are suffered to exist with the full knowledge of the authorities. The blame of this, however, should not be with the Police. We are powerless, unless backed by our judicial officers. If I, a private, should undertake to arrest such a man as HEARN or HALL, not only would he be sure to be acquitted, but some charge would be trumped up against me and I soon be dismissed from the service. Money, you know, can do everything, and these gentlemen have plenty of it. If our worthy Mayor or my Chief will order a genuine descent upon such a house, it will gladden the hearts of the majority of the department.

A POLICEMAN.

Noble Example.

The scholars of Ward School No. 45, situated in West Twenty-fourth-street, Sixteenth Ward, of which Mr. THOMAS FOULKS is Principal, has contributed to the Norfolk and Portsmouth Orphan Fund the following sum:

From scholars and teachers of the male department	$76 23
From young ladies of female department	53 12
From scholars of the primary department	50 00
Total	$182 35

Dutch Bulls from the Stuyvesant Farm.

Governor BRADISH said at the laying of the Historical Society Buildings Corner stone, that "the only objection to the site of the new building was its situation."

Mr. DEPEYSTER in quoting Bishop BERKELEY's famous sentence, said, "Time's latest offspring is its last."

☞ GEORGE PEABODY, Esq., of London, has presented $500 for the benefit of the orphans of Norfolk, Portsmouth, and Gosport, through DUNCAN, SHERMAN & Co., of this City.

☞ The new United States frigate Wabash is to be launched at the Navy-Yard in Philadelphia on Wednesday next.

☞ Yesterday was the anniversary of the surrender of CORNWALLIS at Yorktown, in 1781.

☞ The Latting Observatory is converted into a shot tower.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS, THE GREAT REMEDY FOR NERVOUS DEBILITY.—J. M. BULSHEER, Dep'ty store, Fa., June 20, 1855, says: "My wife has been afflicted with a nervous debility since September, 1851, since which time I have been unable to find any physician or medicine that would benefit her in the least, until one day I called at the store of Dr Harvey, of this town, for some tincture of iron, and described to him the sufferings of my wife; he then handed me a lot of papers to read, among which I found one describing your German Bitters. Immediately procured a few bottles from him, and am pleased to state that the use of the Bitters has done her more good than all the medicine she has heretofore taken. I wish you to send me a half dozen more bottles."

For sale by druggists and dealers in medicine everywhere.

POPULARITY OF GENIN'S EXCELSIOR.—THIS superb novelty in soft Hats is having a run unprecedented in the annals of the trade. It has been adopted by the business community, and in fact by all classes, as the leading undress Hat of the season. Its rich, deep and beautiful claret brown tint, which is as clear as that of the "sable" of similar hue, excites universal admiration. The shape, too, is eminently becoming. Attempts at imitation have been made, but they have failed. No other manufacturer has succeeded in producing the color. GENIN, No. 214 Broadway, opposite St. Paul's Church.

PREPARE FOR WAR—IN FINE WEATHER THE ladies should prepare for Winter, by going to CANTRELL'S, No. 296 Bowery, for a supply of Gaiters suitable for the season, at 12s and 14s. CANTRELL restricts his attention to ladies' and children's Shoes of all kinds, and he is celebrated for the uniform excellence of his workmanship, the material he uses, and the good taste he displays. GREAT FIRE IN BROOKLYN.—DESTRUCTION OF HICKOK & BROWN'S FLOUR MILLS.—WILCOX'S Patent Salamander Safe from Fire proved invincible.—We were last evening informed by one of the clerks of Messrs Hickok & Brown, at Brooklyn, that the Safe had preserved their books and papers from fire at the destruction of their Flour Mills in Brooklyn, on the morning of the 11th inst. We also learn from their "Shipping Orders," and not Herring's Patent Safe as appears by the Card from them. We also learn from that city the employes of Herring & Co. was present when the safe was taken from the ruins and that he immediately broke off the "Wilcox's Patent" plate on the door. This is another attempt of the Associates Silas G. Herring to apply the thunders of the "Wilcox's Patent Salamander" to what he calls Herring's Patent Safe. The honors of fame should keep in mind that Herring & Co. have nothing to do with the "World's Fair" Premium "Herring's Safe," the best Fire proof Safe in the World, and now on the lookout for all such impostors. This celebrated Fire and Burglar Proof Safe can now be had at the Depot, No. 128 Water-st., near Wallst., New-York.

GREAT FIRE IN BROOKLYN.—PROOF OF THE INTEGRITY OF HERRING'S SAFE.—The undersigned, to the person referred to in Messrs. S. G. Wilder & Co.'s pretended card of this morning, as Messrs. HICKOK & BROWN'S Clerk, and who stated that he was the firm of S. G. WILDER & Co., questioned him in relation to the Fire there mentioned; yet I never had or told him the Safe was Wilcox's Patent, or that any of Herring & Co.'s employes, or any other person, ever broke off any plates. The safe in question was a Herring's, and the statements in said S. G. WILDER & Co.'s advertisement are forgeries, relative to their connection with our respective and Safe, is destitute of truth.
E. F. HEARNE,
Superintendent Island Mills Brooklyn.
The above mentioned Safe can be seen with all the original plates and marks, (not those from the range,) at the subscriber's store, who are sole proprietors of Herring's Patent Champion Safe.

GREAT FIRE IN BROOKLYN.
NEW-YORK, Oct. 18, 1855.
Messrs. S. C. Herring & Co:
Gentlemen—We take pleasure in stating that the HERRING'S PATENT SAFE, which we purchased of you about a year since, has been the means of saving our books, papers, &c., from fire, at the destruction of our flour mill in Brooklyn, early on the morning of the 11th inst. The safe was exposed to a severe heat all night, fallen and when cooled off and opened, the contents were found entirely safe. We cheerfully recommend your Safe to public confidence.

TEA, COFFEE AND SUGAR.—UNQUESTIONABLY the place to procure these prime articles of Ancient Origin, of superior flavor, is at the BOWERY TEA WAREHOUSE, No. 113 Bowery, or at the CHELSEA TEA WAREHOUSE, No. 114 9th-av. These well known establishments are identical in their system of management, and by confining themselves to but the one article, possess advantages enjoyed by no other retailers, as a variety, low rents and small profits combine. Please examine before purchasing. N. B.—The Bowery Tea Warehouse is located being Grand st., No. 113, east side, one may be distinguished by the "Little Giant" in the window, who stands on every behalf by his strong lungs, the merits of the Teas, Coffees and Spices of this establishment with fresh ground COFFEE, in quantities to suit, and in quality to please.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.—THE IMPORTant fact is beginning to be understood, that SINGER'S latest improved Family Sewing Machines, remain at the head of all others, even newly invented, in a day, and do it in much better than any other machines, that no otherwise is worth trying as a gift. The manufacturing of SINGER'S Machines has been doubled within a month, and yet the demand more than keeps pace with the increase. For all every description sewing, they are unquestionable.
I. M. SINGER & CO., No. 323 Broadway.

HERNIA.—ONLY PRIZE MEDAL AWARDED TO MARSH & CO., by the Industrial Exhibition of all Nations, on their merits, for their radical cure Truss, adapted to all the superiority—Professors Valentine Mott, Willard Parker, and Jonathan Cornelius. Open from 7 A. M. to 9 P. M.

KNOX.—THIS IS A NAME WHICH ALL PERSONS who want Hats revere. KNOX, who keeps a universe for Hats at the corner of Broadway and Fulton-st., and another at the corner of Broadway and Spring-st., is acknowledged to be one of the best Hatters in the world. His head gear is a great in style; is made up by the most superior workmen, and lasts as long as any fabric of the kind ever manufactured. KNOX'S prices are very low—don't forget that.

EXTRACTS FROM NOTICES OF THE PRESS ALREADY RECEIVED.

From the New York Daily Times.

Seldom have we had a more truthful, a more charming glimpse of rural life. In facts it is highly dramatic; in all its aim is pure and lofty. "Mary Fullen" is a creation of which any living author might well be proud.

From the New-York Express.

Dickens has never surpassed the vividness of some of its descriptions of local scenes.

From the Boston Traveller.

We have read it through with delight. Its tone is eminently religious, and there are scattered through it little bits of pathos as touching as anything to be found in "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

From the New-York Day Book.

We have no hesitation in pronouncing this book superior in pathetic interest, descriptive power, and earnest wholesome vigor, to any story recently published.

From the Boston Post.

As a literary work it is far superior to "Fashion and Famine." Many portions are intensely interesting.

From the Boston Olive Branch.

Many of the scenes are laid in the humble walks of life, and all the author's fine descriptive powers are brought to bear upon them. The comfortless room where the girl watcher waits for her dying father—where they meet at last in his death hour, and part forever; the simple but cheerful home of Chester; the long night agony at Bellevue; the solemn burial, with only those two lonely children for mourners; and the exquisite pictures of life at the Old Homestead—all show the tenderness of the womb, combined with the skill of the artist.

The Plan of the Author in Writing these Books.

Throughout these tales the plan has been to present a picture of ordinary life, with its small daily events its pleasures and its trials, so as to draw out the capabilities of being turned to the best account; great events such as beholl only a few, are thus excluded, and in the hope of helping to present a clue, by example, to the perplexities of daily life, the incidents which render a story exciting have been avoided, and the attempt has been made to make the interest of the book depend on character-painting.

Extract from a Review of the "Heir of Redclyffe" and "Heartsease," in the North American Review for April.

"The first of her writings that made a sensation here was the "Heir," and what a sensation it was! Reprinted to the remains of the tear-washed covers of the copy abroad, we find it belonged to the "5th thousand." How many thousand have been issued since by its publishers, to supply the demand for new, and the places of drowned, dissolved or swept away old copies, we do not attempt to conjecture. Not individuals merely, but households, consisting in great part of tender-hearted young damsels, were plunged into mourning. With a tolerable acquaintance with fictitious heroes (not to speak of real ones) from Sir Charles Grandison down to the unmanly idol Carlton, we have little hesitation in pronouncing Sir Guy Morville, of Redclyffe, Baronet, the most admirable one that we ever met with, in story or in real life. The glorious, joyful boy, the brilliant, ardent, chivalrous child of genius and of fortune, crowned with the beauty of his early business and overcandowed with the darkness of his hereditary doom, and the soft and touching sadness of his early death—what a caution is there! what a vision!

THE NEW STAR OF THE SOUTH.
Says the Mobile Daily Advertiser in a lengthy review of
MARION HARLAND'S NEW BOOK,
THE HIDDEN PATH:
"It is refreshing, in these times of cheap literature and intellectual nostrums, to find a volume written with a purpose, and sustaining a character for ability and literary worth of the better days of our literature. It is certainly a wonder, in the multitude of demands made upon the children, prone to encourage and be-puff productions of the moment, merely because a Southern, instead of a Northern, claims the honor of their paternity, to find books written by native and residents of the South, that can afford to discard sectional partiality or prejudice, and boldly challenge criticism or approval on their merits, as the unassisted offspring of Southern brains. In the matter of good morals and pure literature, such a book, in our judgment, is the "Hidden Path," and its author has a right to claim precedence with the most accomplished and brilliant female novelists of the day.

* * * * * * *

To us, our review has been truly a labor of love, and we cordially commend all who desire a rich intellectual treat, abounding in lessons of wind-em, manliness and true happiness, to the absorbing pages of the "Hidden Path."

ALMACKS!
A TALE OF ENGLISH SOCIETY.
BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE HEIR OF REDCLYFFE."

Guess in Almacks! The American reader of the present day will wish to see the book, knowing that it has lately published by LONG & BROTHER, commenced. The best in the school, written by one of the few who have admission to the circle of fashion, as described in "Almacks" is a tale founded in action, based on the fortunes of the fashionable London, embracing some 18 or 20 different characters, which flit, during the season of months, the brief space a week, to dance, flirt, intrigue, exhibit their dresses, in talk scandal, criticise their neighbor's attire and morals, intrigue, gore, and revel over the ruin opportunities of their (this very particular circle) who, in all their glory of rank and wealth, have been roughly excluded from entering the charmed circle.

The cost is nothing! more rank and wealth is of no avail whatever. Dukes and Duchesses have been excluded with out hesitation, and millionaires have been blackballed. The fashionable and generally titled ladies are the directors of rectors; and once a week during the season they meet to decide who shall enter the ball room. From their decision there is no appeal, and they decide also as to the number of balls that the favored ones shall have access to.

We have said enough to awaken the reader's curiosity. In the highly interesting story contained in this volume, the mysteries of Almacks are fully developed. The period selected is the reign of George the Fourth—when the chivalry of the Court reigned supreme in the world of Fashion, and without containing a word that can offend the chastest ear; the utmost volume contains matter of lively, without gossip that cannot fail to be highly interesting to the fashionable world of the United States, and all others who are interested in the mysteries, here or elsewhere.

Complete in one Volume. Price 50 cents.

PUBLISHED THIS DAY,
TWICE MARRIED;
A STORY OF CONNECTICUT LIFE.

This romance has appeared in parts in "Putnam's Monthly," in each number of which, for a great portion of the present year, it has received equal plaudits. The very kind encouragement, and praise by the critical opinion of the press, and by the public at large, has induced the Publishers to publish it in the present form, in which they need hardly say it will meet, with the numerous appreciation as heretofore. 1 vol., 12mo; cloth, 75 cents.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS, AS IT APPEARED IN "PUTNAM'S MONTHLY."

From the Daily British Whig.

"Twice Married" could not have been written by any one but an American, so thoroughly characteristic of the country is it.

From the New-Bedford Mercury.

Among the best written tales we have, of primitive Yankee life and character.

From the Indianapolis Journal, Ind.

It is one of a very few stories in periodicals that we could have wished finished at once, so that we could see how it comes out.

From the New-York Tribune.

"Twice Married" contains some charming Yankee sketches, of which we have already had several specimens.

From the Dedham Gazette.

"Twice Married," the sparkling and brilliant style of which constantly brings to mind the stories which have given so decided a character to the pages of Old Ebony.

TO THE TRADE.

The great number of orders for this book, announced for publication on the 1st of October, rendered it necessary to postpone the publication day to the 20th October.

BITS OF BLARNEY.
Third Edition now ready.
BITS OF BLARNEY, by Dr R. Shelton Mackenzie, Editor of "Shield's 53 etchings of the Irish Bar," "Noctes Ambrosianæ," "Life of Curran," &c. 12mo, cloth, $1.

From the Knickerbocker Magazine.

The reader who takes up this volume with the idea that its contents are exclusively "blarney," will, we opine, be agreeably disappointed when he finds what an agreeable book Dr. Mackenzie has given to the public.

From the Boston Transcript.

A brighter project has not lately been started than that of Dr. Mackenzie, to weave into a single volume the salient points—traditional, historical and speculative—of that vast fund of half-pathetic, half-farcical lore which he appropriately calls "Bits of Blarney."

From the Hartford Christian Secretary.

If any of our readers are troubled with the blues, let them read "Bits of Blarney," and if they do not experience a medical cure by the operation, we will pay the bill.

From the Worcester Palladium.

As an original, racy delineation of Irish character, this volume will scarcely be found to have an equal.

From the New-York Tribune.

It is full of Irish anecdote and pleasantry, and will be greatly relished by all who have a taste for the native humor of the Emerald Isle.

Also, a second edition of
THE LIFE OF JOHN PHILPOT CURRAN.
By his son, William Henry Curran, with Notes and Additions by Dr. Shelton Mackenzie, and a Portrait on Steel. 12mo; cloth, $1 25.

Also,
THE PRIVATE LIFE OF AN EASTERN KING.
By a member of the household of his late majesty Mazeen Deen, King of Oude. 12mo; cloth, 75 cents.
J. S. REDFIELD, No. 34 Beekman-st.

PUBLISHED THIS DAY, OCT. 20:
THE JAPAN EXPEDITION.
JAPAN, AND AROUND THE WORLD.
An account of Three Visits to the Japanese Empire, with Sketches of Madeira St. Helena, Cape of Good Hope, Mauritius, Ceylon, Singapore, Okinawa and Loo-Choo.
By Dr. J. W. Spalding,
Of the United States steam frigate Mississippi, flag-ship of the Expedition.
One vol. 12mo, cloth, with eight illustrations on tint. $1 25.

From the Baltimore American.

It describes all that the intelligent author saw in a clear and very agreeable manner, and mentions many things of a personal character which, of course, would form no part of an official report.

From the Patriot.

Col. Spalding is a man whose character in the community in which he has heretofore resided places him above suspicion, so that his narrative may be implicitly trusted. He is withal a racy writer, and a person gifted with very uncommon powers of observation.
J. S. REDFIELD, No. 34 Beekman-st.

TOWER'S ELEMENTS OF GRAMMAR.
An instructive little book, designed to lead the young learner, by easy and pleasant steps, to a knowledge of the principles of grammar, and a habit of speaking grammatically. Read the following note from the Superintendent of Common Schools at Lewiston, Me.

"You will please place the inclosed to my credit, and balance my account. I am much obliged to you for the book, and should any of your good people, at any time, be passing this way, if they will take the trouble to call at my school room, they will find a better testimony in favor of the little work, by hearing my class recite from it, than if or any one else could write it."

"Respectfully yours, N. B. BARKER."
Published by DANIEL BURGESS & CO.,
Price 12 cents. No. 60 John-st., New-York.

POLITICAL.

NEW-YORK, Oct. 18, 1855.
DEAR SIR; THE GENERAL REFORM COMMITTEE have observed with satisfaction your course as a member of the Common Council of the City of New-York, the present year. And we, as members of said Reform Committee, and residents of your District, respectfully ask that you will enter the canvass before the people for a re-election. We are respectfully
THOS B STILLMAN, GERARD STUYVESANT,
R. A READING, WM. HISBARD,
WM. H HOOPER, R. A. WITHARS,
J. M. QUACKENBOS, ALFRED S. PURDY.
To WILLIAM BRUSLAW, Esq., Representative of the Twenty-ninth Council District.

NEW-YORK, Oct. 19, 1855.
GENTLEMEN: Your note of 18th inst. is received, and while I had scarcely dare believe, but that is my inexperience I may have committed some error, yet I cannot but feel much gratified to find that my course has met the approbation of my fellow-citizens. Were I to consult my own feelings, I would gladly retire from the duties of public life. But on the advice of numerous friends, I am induced to waive personal consideration, and accede to your desire that I should enter the canvass for re-election.
Respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
WILLIAM BRUSLOW.
To Thos. B. Stillman, Esq., and others.

[illegible] THE TRUE MEDICAL WRITER—THE [illegible] PROVED OUT—THE TRUE AND SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT INDICATED.

By R. G. Pryor, A. M., M. D., No. 714 Broadway, N. Y.

Believing in my former letters beyond, that "Inhalation" is not a new practice, thereby supposing the public attention arrested in addition to it, I will proceed to give the reader a few plain and obvious reasons why the inhaling of medicines from the lungs never had been, and never can, by chance, a successful method of curing Consumption.

The diseases of the lungs may be divided into two general classes: 1st, Those appearing with their [illegible] and 2d, those having their origin in the [illegible] of this membrane, and in the enlargement of the [illegible] in the air cells, lying outside of the membrane, or, in other words, as said in the [illegible] tubercles, hydatids, cartilage, &c. These [illegible] are always an indurated, [illegible] condition of the mucous membrane lining the interior of lungs. In their progress they may, and often do, occasion ulceration of this membrane, which may [illegible] it in certain points, and invade the substance of the lungs. Asthma, also, is sometimes, effects probably the nerves of the lungs, occasioning a constriction of the air passages. But the class of lung diseases, caused in very advanced stages, is easily curable. In thousands of instances, nature unaided, effects a cure; indeed, the natural tendency in this class is to recovery; as they are the most common complaints we have, no person in our climate escaping them altogether, so they are the most perfectly curable of any the physician is called to treat.

It is not this class which clothes that fatal word "consumption" with its terrors—which is pronounced incurable by physicians generally, and under ordinary circumstances, it is strictly true. This distinguishing feature, or true characteristic of consumption. This form of disease originates mostly in the deposit in the substance of the lungs, contiguous to the lining membrane of the cells and air passages, or between the walls of adjacent cells, of a peculiar cheese-like substance, called tubercle. It is found in collections, more or less extensive, of small particles, each in size from a pin's head to that of a pea. Sooner or later, after their deposit, these tubercles generally become softened, are converted into a semi-fluid, yellowish, creamy matter. The substance of the lungs lying in contact with them first becomes infiamed, then ulcerated, and is disorganized. The air cells in the vicinity are destroyed, and thus the ulcerous matter finds its way into the air passages, and is thrown off by expectoration. While once these deposits are made in the lungs, they can be removed only by the slow natural process, or by absorption, which is usually checked. It should be still, however, that tubercles may exist in the lungs through a long life and never pass into the softened state, though the nature and usual tendency is to softening, ulceration and fatal disorganization of the lungs.

While the above we choose of lung diseases are thus distinct in their nature and location, they are usually combined in all cases of true consumption. A long-continued, chronically inflamed, or irritated condition of the lining membranes of the lungs, by weakening the system, and interfering with the proper oxidating of the blood, may so affect the general constitution as to occasion the deposition of tubercles. So too the presence of tubercles, matter in the lungs, though not preceded by any inflammatory irritation, may and generally does establish in the surrounding substance, and acting as irritation and inflammation there. It is from this latter affection, with the cough and expectoration usually present.

Thus we see that in nearly all cases of consumption we have two distinct and different diseases to deal with, one located upon the internal surface, and the other in the substance of the lungs. And it must be obvious to the reader that any system of treatment, to be successful in this complication of cases of disease, must be adapted to cure to both,—that any method or system adapted only to subdue the inflammation or irritation of the internal surface of the lungs, in the presence of tubercles or the spreading ulceration, must fail of success. Just here, is to be found the reason why "consumption" is pronounced and incurable in the hands of physicians generally, whether "rational" practitioners or empirics. Almost all treat it as a simple disease.

Now, turning to the treatment by Inhalation, we discover that this method is addressed to only one of the diseases above described, and that the first portion of the lung. Medicine inhaled into the lungs can, by possibility, affect directly only the internal surfaces. If there is inflammation or indurations on these surfaces, and the proper means are employed, it may be of benefit by Inhalation. But if the substance of the lungs be diseased and tubercles are deposited, this treatment cannot be direct influence upon them. It cannot reach them. When, therefore, the Inhalation of medicated vapor or air is valuable in subduing the diseased action that may be going on in the membrane lining the lungs, it must, in all cases of true consumption, to be successful, be accompanied by the exhibition of those constitutional and general remedies adapted to reach the seat of the disease in the substance of the lungs.

But it may be asked, if there are ulcers and cavities in the lungs, will not "Inhalation" reach and cure them? I answer, No, and for this reason:—It is impossible to get into the lungs, with impunity, any medicine of sufficient potency to produce a healing effect upon an ulcerous surface. It should be recollected that whatever is inhaled is diffused through the entire lungs. It cannot be confined to any one point in them. Its action cannot therefore be restricted to the ulcer or the cavity. Every part of the mucous membrane, throughout every air-tube and cell is touched by it; and a remedy which has power to produce any appreciable effect upon an ulcer would inevitably irritate and injure the healthy surface. Only very mild and entirely soothing medicines, then, can be employed. Let any physician bear by the experiment of curing or "cleansing" an indolent ulceration ulcer upon the external surface of the body anywhere by blowing medicated vapor upon it, confining his experiments, of course, to such vapors only, as are not easily inhaled into the lungs? The absurdity of the thing must be apparent to a glance. Substituting peculiarities excepted, I am asking, the use of vapors of sufficient potency to directly affect ulcerous cavities. But, in every such attempt, an injury is inflicted upon the healthy part of the lung. The idea of "applying the medicine to the sore," is very plausible. In the lungs, however, it is seen to be impracticable. If a physician were called to treat an ulcer on the leg, and found it impossible to apply caustic to it, except he enveloped the whole body of his patient in a caustic plaster, he would hardly advise the treatment, even though the application of caustic to the ulcer might be extremely desirable. This difficulty is a good one. It is, or will be soon, inherent in the nature of the case, and results from the very structure and office of the lungs.

Even in cases of neither ulceration or indurations in the lungs, the effect practicable by Inhalation is quite limited. In nearly all such cases the affection is confined to comparatively a small space. The larger part of the surface of the lungs, except in rare cases, is in a natural or normal condition. To avoid exciting up inflammation in these healthy parts, only mild and unstimulating vapors can be used. In this form of disease, therefore, in both of its stages of a graver character, the efficacy of Inhalation is increased by experience to be very, very greatly questioned.

It is a great delusion in regard consumption as a local disease. So far as such is any disease of the lungs local, simply, unless it be one resulting from mechanical injury. It is constitutional in its origin, and only local in its development. I will not here discuss this point, but appeal to every and any intelligent physician in the land, the correctness of my position. Now, let it be remembered, that the treatment by Inhalation alone, is addressed to a local disease. If, therefore, it could suppress the local development, it cannot eradicate the disease from the system. Like the healing of a scrofulous ulcer on the body, it leaves the poisonous source of the disease still unaffected.

But it may be said that medicines inhaled are absorbed by the lungs, and that thus a constitutional effect is produced. There is some truth in this. Still, from the circumstances above mentioned, the effect must be limited, and entirely inadequate to the extinction of the specific disease it is called to encounter. The reader will observe that all the description that have placed upon by the healthy portions of the lungs. The poison is in the blood, is, from its very constitution, incapable of reaching, by powers, in this manner, to diseased parts, the vital vessels distributed too, and are adapted to carrying out pure atmospheric air. They can receive and bear healthy exchanges nothing else without disturbance and effects; and to make them the medium

[illegible]

In view of the suggestions here made the reader will see why Inhalation, as practiced by the New-York Inhalists, must be unsuccessful in Consumption. It is a local treatment for a constitutional disorder. It reaches only one form of disease, and that the least important, in a combination of two or more—only medicines of an exceedingly mild and really inefficient character, can be employed, such as are in fact inadequate to the extinguishers of the case—and it is exceedingly liable to cause injury.

In view of these suggestions, it is also seen what the real merits of this treatment are, that is in all positive

[illegible] years ago in New-Orleans, and four years ago in New-York, at No. 441 Broadway, ARPER MUNROE & Co. established a strictly "one price" system as the best shape for disposing of their goods, and one which they were confident would prove the most satisfactory to the better class of purchasers. At first it was up-hill work, and many apparent sacrifices were made in establishing permanently this desirable mode of trading, until its popularity has become a fixed fact with their customers. Such popularity, as a matter of course, attracted the attention of their competitors in business, and other houses now come out in blazing capitals, "One Price Store," "The One Price System," &c., &c., but in most, if not in all instances, without the nerve to carry out their high-sounding manifestoes. They "mention a virtue if they have it not," and it is to a degree satisfactory to know, (for its use a vhop phrase) by putting on the mask of hypocrisy they are enabled thereby to pay an indirect homage to virtue. It will be satisfactory to ALFRED MUNROE & Co., if their cotemporaries, all of LAW INTELLIGENCE.

Impertinent to Pilots.

[illegible] Court.

People vs. Morris Ketchum.—This was a suit instituted by the District Attorney on the relation of the Hellgate pilots to recover a penalty amounting to $50 of the defendant, who was owner of the vessel called Sarah E. Breese, forbidding the vessel thereby Hellgate without a pilot.

The suit was brought under the 9th section of the Act of 1847, which provided a penalty of $50 against any person not a licensed Hellgate pilot who should pilot a vessel through Hellgate.

Mr. Ridgway appeared for the District Attorney, and proved that the defendant, as the owner of the Sarah E. Breese, took her vessel through Hellgate without a pilot.

Mr. McMahon appeared for defense, and after giving his testimony to show that the services alleged to be pilotage were only towage service asked for a dismissal of the complaint, on the ground that the action should have been brought in the name of the Board of Wardens of this port—and that the action could not be brought in the name of the People, and the counsel referred to the Statute of 1850 as mandatory of the Act of 1819, stating that only.

Mr. Ridgway was heard in reply.

After argument, the Judge rendered judgment of dismissal in favor of the defendant, on the ground taken by Mr. McMahon.

Sales at the Stock Exchange...Oct. 19.

[illegible]

The Stock Market opened rather weak in prices this forenoon, with a considerable excitement manifested to sell the Railroad and Coal Stocks of the going states. The business in these was large, Illinois Central Bonds were also pressed on sale, and closed a fraction below 80 ⅌ cent. State Stocks were steady, though the sales were not important. The announcement in the afternoon that the House amended Union, sailing from this port to morrow, will take $600,000 or $700,000 in Gold, had a further depressing influence, and the closing bids at the Second Board were [illegible] ⅌ cent lower than Erie, and the sales of Toledo and Michigan Central Bonds, 1 ⅌ cent, on Toledo and Michigan Central Bonds. The shares of this Company were 1 ⅌ cent higher, under purchases made on a European order. There was a decided fall of 4 ⅌ cent in Galena and Chicago shares, as compared with the top rates of yesterday. There is some talk of an additional issue of Stock, though we cannot learn that it is likely to be immediately made. The bids for the stock sold for New-York Central were 94 ⅌ cent. Prices advanced of no actual value. There were some private transactions in Government Stocks of the United States Stocks of 1857-8 which were transferred, instead of from Europeans parties. The demand to purchase is said to have come out by the last mail. The amount transferred to day is $160,000. The general market for Bonds ruled heavy this afternoon. Although there was no change in Money rates, and only a moderate demand, there was a slightly uneasy feeling displayed by the practical construction put upon the news of yesterday by some of the Continental bankers, who are counting Gold by the Union to likely contemplations in France and Germany, in preference to French bills at 60 days. There was not much done in Sterling Exchange, which the [illegible] were were offering to draw at 109, and telegraphic advices were received from the South of lower figures at New Orleans.
